Old Felt Hats

Instead of throwing away the old felt hats, they may be used for oil filters, mats for plants, or cut up discs and paste them on the chairs to prevent scratching of the floors and to deaden the noise.

UNJUST PUNISHMENT

It would be nice to say that justice always triumphs at the bridge table, and that a huge penalty (for example) is the direct result of reckless bidding. But this, alas, is not true. Observe South's fate in the following deal—the cruel and inhuman punishment meted out to him for a bid that could not be fairly censured.

East dealer
Both sides vulnerable.

♠ 8732	♠ K54
♥ 65	♥ A98
♦ 10764	♦ 73
♣ 953	♣ A93

♠ A9f ♠ K54
 ♥ K4 ♥ A98
 ♦ QJ10 ♦ 73
 ♣ QJ10 ♣ A93
 ♣ 82 ♣ 74

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♥	1NT	2♠	Pass
Pass	Pass	Pass	Pass

Obviously, South was only a jack short of the requirements for a one-notrump opening, so his overall cannot be called rash. The outcome, however, was calamitous. West, in no hurry to lead his partner's hearts, made the sound opening of the club queen. South won and led the spade queen. West tucking, East won and returned a club. This took out South's second stopper in the suit, and when he doggedly led another spade—for want of a better play—his troubles began to pile up thick and fast.

West took the second spade trick with the ace and ran his three good clubs. East discarded a spade, did not find it so easy to discard. He gave up the diamond nine, but then had the painful choice of discarding his spade, his heart or his diamond stopper. He finally decided that the opponents could not run many diamond tricks, and discarded the diamond jack. Thereupon West led a diamond, and when East cashed both the ace and queen, South was squeezed again. Now he gave up the spade ten. East promptly led a low heart; West won with the king and cashed the spade nine. East's ace and queen of hearts then accounted for the last two tricks.

So South won exactly two tricks, and was down 1400 at his contract of one-odd.

ELLEN'S DIARY

by an Island Farmer's Wife

What has this week been but a daughter said kindly to Gage. "Not that four isn't a nice lot," she added. He considered a moment. "Yes," he agreed, "four is a nice lot. And sometimes," he suggested, "the fewer there are the better. They're more likely to be kept..." Will you be keeping every one?" he asked. She laughed softly. "Why, of course!" she replied, "whatever put a silly question like that into your head?"

Now it is one of the best loved holidays of the year that is about to dawn: The Queen's Birthday. We remember its history—how in the olden years a young and courageous lady stole her way into the lives and affection of her people to be much beloved by them; how after her long and quietly fruitful reign she was much mourned and her memory perpetuated since by honoring her birthday all down the years. If to many now "Victoria" is but a name, another Queen of equally high resolve the Day honors: she who at every turn holds the respect and admiration of her subjects as in her own prayerful words she continued "to discharge worthily the heavy task laid upon me so early in my life."

The Prayer written by William Byrd away back in the years, for the coronation of Elizabeth I is one we are sure could be lovingly offered by her people in behalf of our Queen in this an altogether new day and generation: "O Lord, make Thy servant, Elizabeth, our Queen to rejoice in Thy strength; give her her heart's desire, and deny not the request of her lips; but present her with Thine everlasting blessing, and give her a long life, even for ever and ever."

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M. D.

SOME THOUGHTS ON LONGEVITY

In these days, when men and women have many years longer to live than at the beginning of 1900, there are, naturally, more elderly people to be looked after or to look after themselves.

Last year, at the Sixth Annual Meeting of the Canadian Heart Association in Winnipeg, some thoughts about old age were expressed by several of the members from the Department of Medicine, McGill University, the Montreal General Hospital, and the Jewish Hospital of Montreal. Today the average duration of life predictable at birth is about 70 years and it is at this age that the man or woman gets the idea that he or she begins to feel old, but that he may survive beyond 80 or 90.

"Everyone wants to live long but no one wants to be old." This personal view of Tallebrand is still held by most people. Dr. Harold N. Segall of Montreal uses the question: Would the duration of life (70 years) have satisfied the Psalmist: The desire of David to live longer than 70 years represents the wisdom of the greed of old age. It would be both interesting and useful to know what the modern authority would say about longevity. The ideal authority might be described as a man who himself belongs in the age group of over seventy, enjoying obviously good mental vigor and suffering only minor physical disabilities of old age. This authority on aging should be a physician who has not only studied the individual but has led in the study of public health and understands the problems which accom-

Exchange Vows at Stoney Creek, Ont.

A marriage was solemnized at Stoney Creek, Ont., on May 7 when Helen M. Twaddle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Twaddle, exchanged vows with Donald R. MacKenzie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell MacKenzie of Malpeque, P. E. I. The bride and groom are shown above (center) with their attendants.

Browne-Rodd Wedding

A pretty wedding was solemnized in Zion Presbyterian Church Saturday, February 20, at 2 o'clock, when Roma H. Rebecca Rodd, daughter of Mrs. T. Vernon Rodd and the late Mr. Rodd was united in marriage to William W. Browne of Toronto, and Niagara Falls, Ont., son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Browne of Dublin, Ireland.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Carl Currie, assisted by the Rev. Harold W. Brown. Large baskets of spring flowers formed the setting for the ceremony. The guests were marked with nosegays of pansies and lily-of-the-valley. Mr. Frank Johnson, A.T.C.L. organist of Zion Church, played the wedding music. Miss Norma Datzel sang "When Song is Sweet" by Gertrude Sans-Sauel, during the signing of the register. The bridal party entered the church to the strains of the "Pilgrims Chorus" from Tannhauser. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Gordon. She wore a gown of white satin which flowed from bodice of hand clipped Chantilly lace. Her finger-tip veil of french illusion was held in place by a coronet of pearls. She carried a bouquet of red sweetheart roses. The bride's attendants her sister Dorothy as maid-of-honor, her dress was pastel green embroidered nylon taffeta, with inset of pleated fawn, with matching headdress and mits. The bridesmaids were her sister Lois and Miss Mary Watts. They wore lilac maize net over taffeta with jackets to match, with headdress of net and small flowers. They carried nosegays of mixed flowers. Little Miss Sandra Myers acted as flower girl. She wore a long dress of maize nylon net over taffeta with lilac velvet trim, her head dress was a coronet of lilac and maize flowers.

The groom was supported by Mr. Vernon Rodd brother of the bride. Mr. J. W. Rodd and Mr. Donnie Shaw were the ushers. The bride's mother chose for her gown grey figured satin, with rose accessories and a corsage of roses.

The reception was held in the church hall. The bride's table was arranged with bouquets of roses and snapdragon, with silver candleabra with white tapers, centred with a three tier wedding cake. The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. Carl Currie and responded to by the groom. Mrs. John Datzel was in charge of the guest book.

The bride and groom left by plane on a trip to Bermuda, the bride wearing a beige weed suit with top coat of red and matching accessories. They are residing at Niagara Falls.

DOROTHY DIX

Her Bad Reputation

DEAR MISS DIX: At 18 I feel I lack the judgment to do anything about a problem that is troubling me. I hope you can help. I've been going with Ella, who is 17, for a year. She acquired an untoward reputation, due solely to the kind of company she kept before I met her. From the past year's experience I know I do not wish to be associated with her. My friends, yet people I meet are always telling me she's no good. Unhappily, I can learn how to treat these rumors, I'm afraid I'll have to give her up, as I'm finding the situation difficult to cope with.

NEEDS SYMPATHETIC FRIENDS

ANSWER: A bad reputation is just overcome by acquiring a good one. Living down an indiscreet past is a difficult task and one that is greatly aided by a few sympathetic friends. The trouble is that most people are extremely loath to associate, even in a minor way, with one whose character is not above reproach. Faith and loyalty are two of the finest qualities a human being can have—unfortunately they are too rare. You are quite young to act in the capacity you have chosen as champion, but if you preserve in it, you certainly can help your young lady live down the past. Her conduct now, of course, must be absolutely beyond question; her associates must be impeccable. You can help her to get into the activities she should pursue and, through the very evidence of your faith in her, communicate the same spirit to others. The responsibility of helping someone redeem herself is not to be taken lightly, but it is a rewarding task. Do try to stick to it.

How Can I?

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I avoid having the rods of an umbrella catching on other people's belongings when riding on a crowded street car?

A. This will not happen if a rubber band is wrapped around the lower part of the handle and then slipped over the tips of the rods.

Q. How can I have smooth legs without shaving them?

A. If you insist upon removing the hair from the legs, instead of using a safety razor try using the finest grade of sandpaper.

Q. How can I stiffen organdies and laces?

A. Try using skimmed milk to stiffen the fine laces and organdies.

many old age—social, economical and emotional.

To illustrate his point, Dr. Segall quotes an "ideal" authority in the person of Professor Haven Emerson of New York, now 79 years of age, who in a recent letter to Dr. Segall quotes one sentence:

"Let us apply such wisdom as we have to build, to protect, and to develop health of body and mind, while the cells of the organism are capable of repair, growth, and activity, from care before birth, through the years of maturity, but not make believe we can salvage one who has already become old—and by good hygiene return the qualities of youth to those already in the late decades of life."

We may remember that in the years before extreme care was given to infants and children, more of them died at birth and during the first year than lived, it is really because the lives of so many children were saved at that time and since that we have so many old people now.

ANSWER: What you want is for your husband to trump up a story of intrigue so you'll be able to keep up a running commentary on your present tactics of nagging, jealousy, suspicion, and one of these days he'll really give you something to worry about, or you may not have him too long.
