Great Wave Of Hatred, Fear Sweeps Indian Subcontinent

DACCA, East Pakistan (AP)— A great wave of hatred and fear is sweeping a section of the Indian subcontinent.

Entire families, some clutching only a few bundles, a brass pot or a prized rooster, are on the move across the dusty Assam plain of India and the rice paddies and jute fields of East Pakistan.

Hindus and some Christians are leaving Moslem Pakistan for India in a tragic replay of decades-old religious, economic and social strife.

The Moslems are moving the other way, from Hindu areas of India into Pakistan.

Each refugee family, each refugee train, carries with it a powder keg of pentup emotion that could touch off rioting like that which followed such migrations in the past.

Blood already has been spilled.

No one can say with accuracy how many persons are on the move or what the death toll has been in sporadic clashes that have broken out when frightened, fleeing Hindus met frightened, fleeing Moslems.

Many thousands just walk across.

Indian officials say as many as 10,000 line up daily in Dacca to apply for permission to enter India. There has been no real attempt by either Pakistan or India to publish reliable casualty figures.

There is an ever-present danger of an escalation into serious conflict between India and Pakistan.

The two nations, already bitter enemies, almost daily charge each other with practising or at least condoning, religious persecution and shoving unwanted minorities across the border.

The large scale migrations started last month when an orgy of killing, looting and rape erupted in parts of both India and Pakistan. Some who saw it say parts of both countries were danger zones for men, women and children for three days.

In rural areas outside Dacca are burned out houses and untilled fields of Hindus whose Moslem neighbors suddenly descended on them in nighttime raids. The owners—those who lived—fled with what they could carry.

The same thing happened to Moslems in parts of India.

For those who saw no violence, reports of trouble or just wild rumor are enough to make them pull up stakes. Still vivid are the memories of 1947, when, by some estimates 1,000,000 persons died in the Hindu-Moslem rioting that accompanied the partition of British India into the separate nations of Pakistan and India.

WOMEN DECLARE WAR ON DEADBEAT HUSBANDS

VANCOUVER (CP)— "Our husbands are running around living on steaks and caviar and we are eating sardines and beans."

Mrs. Pearl Bentley, 31, made the statement following the organizational meeting of Women Only.

Forty distraught women turned up Thursday night to declare war on deadbeat husbands.

Their aim is to apprise the British Columbia government of every loophole in the Wives' and Children's Maintenance Act by which husbands avoid supporting families they have deserted.

Mrs. Bentley, who supports three children—aged six, seven and 10 years—on $147 a month social welfare payments, organized the group. She told the meeting a brief has gone to every legislature member calling attention to the welfare burden placed on the taxpayer through lack of proper court enforcement of the act.

GET LAW AMENDED

"We must get the law amended so that our husbands cannot get away with murder," she said.

She said the government should "sew up the mother-eaten holes in our antiquated laws."

If necessary, she said, the women and their children would march on Victoria and the social welfare offices.

"I am tired of living on social assistance," she said.

"We have got to get our husbands to pay support by hook, line or sinker."

Eventually, Mrs. Bentley said she hopes women only will be able to tackle reformation of the divorce laws.

Summary Of Public Accounts Is Aimed To Stir Up Interest

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has published a new 28 page, dry-as-dust summary of the public accounts which it hopes will stir up some public interest in Ottawa's business.

However, some politicians are wondering just how much political interest there may be in the new publication, especially if it is followed by annual editions in the next few years.

Finance Minister Gordon tabled the document in the Commons when he also tabled the regular editions of the public accounts and auditor-general's reports for the last fiscal year.

The new booklet, measuring eight by 10 inches, is bound in a glossy cover of just about as fiery blue as imaginable. It reports government revenues and expenditures in summary form for the fiscal year which ended last March 31, just before the Conservatives went out of office to be succeeded by the Liberals.

The so-called abridged report of the public accounts of Canada carries a simple foreword signed by Mr. Gordon. It says a wider distribution of the basic data contained in it "may prove of value to those who desire information, in summary form, of the more significant aspects of government financial transactions during the fiscal year . . ."

50 CENTS EACH

Copies, it is noted on the fly-leaf, are available from Queen's Printer bookshops in Ottawa, Toronto and Montreal "or through your bookseller," at 50 cents apiece.

Then follows detailed tables extracted from the larger unabridged edition of the public accounts, showing such information as the 1962-63 deficit of $692,000,000, up from $570,000,000 forecast by former Conservative finance minister George Nowlan Oct. 22, 1962.

Another table on budgetary expenditures notes the politically interesting fact that payments to provincial and municipal governments for general purposes dropped from 1961-62.

The book reports expenditures by each department of government under 33 separate classifications along with revenue each department received in taxes, investment earnings and sales of licences, permits and services.

Finally the new booklet contains a page of explanatory notes seeking to describe just how government accounts are kept.

Main political interest in the abridgement is how next year's edition, covering the first year of the new Liberal administration, will compare with the record of the last year of the former Conservative government.

PRINCE PLAYS TRUMPET

EDINBURGH (Reuters) — Prince Charles, 15-year-old heir to the British throne, went back to school at Gordonstoun Monday after a surprise public performance as a trumpet player. In Saint Giles Cathedral Sunday afternoon, he joined the brass section of Gordonstoun's 80-piece orchestra in a musical half-hour before the service.

The bidding:

The Ethics Committee at Alcatraz was in solemn session South was pressing charges against a fellow-inmate whom he accused of violating the proprieties of the game.

The facts were simple enough. The day before the meeting, South had found himself in a six heart contract on the hand shown. Obviously, on the merits of the hand, he had to lose the ace of diamonds, and the only question was whether or not he would lose a trump trick.

Had he been left to his own devices, South might not have guessed to finesse against East's queen of hearts.

But the question never came up. As soon as the bidding was over, East, a player of considerable skill, but with a reputation for sharp practice, took a card out of his hand and was about to make a lead out of turn.

Before he could do so, though, his attention was called to the fact that it was West's opening lead. So East replaced the card in his hand, but not before South saw it was the three of hearts!

An involuntary murmur of admiration rose from the members of the committee when they heard this, but they were quickly silenced by the chairman. Clearly, South was certain to be victimized by the brilliant near- lead out of turn. Declarer was bound to misguess the trump situation later, since he couldn't possibly conceive of a trump lead from East with a holding of Q-x-x.

But West ruined the sparkling maneuver. He opened... guess what?..... a trump! So South made the slam and no harm was done.

When the committee questioned East about his lead, he denied vehemently any ill intent. He knew, he said, that it was not his lead. But he also knew—and this was confirmed by several members of the committee —that West practically always opened a trump against slam bids.

He had therefore taken the three of hearts from his hand in anticipation of the expected trump lead.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
