BURGESS BEDTIME

he turned and ran back to the trunk of the tree. It was a fairly big tree. Happy Jack was glad that it was big enough for him to dodge around. He knew he would have to do a lot of dodging. He did. It was a game of dare and dodge with life the prize for one, and a good breakfast for the other. If Happy Jack won it would mean life for himself, for Mrs. Happy Jack and for the baby she was carrying. Mrs. Happy Jack, still clinging to the trunk of the other tree, held her breath as she watched Happy Jack dodge. She knew that he was trying for a chance to get to another tree, and so lead Red-tail away. "How brave he is," thought she, and held her breath as Red-tail made a sudden swoop that narrowly missed Happy Jack.
