

RAVE REVIEWS FOR ACT

Dear Students:

People need people. Here at UPEI, we students need one another, perhaps more than we actually realize. We need to share with each other and to express our thoughts, our values, and our beliefs to one another. ACT VI provided a setting in which this type of sharing was made easier. I found that many of the barriers, inhibitions, and tension found at the university were somewhat removed and that people more readily communicated with one another. ACT VI was a weekend in which fellow students shared with one another what they believed in and what motivated them as individuals. It was a time to talk together, sing together, have fun together, eat together, laugh together, be quiet together, and pray together.

For me, people who were simply a face in the crowd at UPEI became much more real to me. They became people that I could not only smile at, but smile with. The theme stressed at ACT VI was one of unity, motivated by love. Sure, there were differences of opinion and different beliefs - we did not all of a sudden agree with one another and become totally unified. However, with this common motivation, we could look to the one who restores unity - Jesus Christ.

Well, you know and I know that you don't have to go to an ACT weekend before you can share and communicate with others on campus, the people we deal with all day.

There is no sudden burst of sharing or revealing of ourselves. ACT VI, for me, simply provided the opportunity for important concerns to be discussed and dealt with. I found the weekend to be a refreshing one - I enjoyed myself! I found it to be one in which I became more aware of our need for fellowship with one another, our responsibility to one another, and our need for fellowship with and responsibility to the One who created us, and made each of us a special human being.

Dear Friends:
With ACT VII very near, I am happy that I have a chance to share a few thoughts of ACT with you. After all, to me, sharing is what makes ACT so special.

After experiencing some doubt, I finally went ahead with my plans to attend ACT V last fall. Being a new student from Ontario, I wanted to take every chance to make friends and to feel more at home in the university community. This was easy with ACT. During that weekend, a group of thirty or forty people shared in some of the most simple, yet meaningful ways. We exchanged ideas and thoughts that had earlier been locked inside of us. We played together and sang songs together. We overcame the boundaries of "you" and "me". We became us. Some of my closest friends are people that I met during ACT V, and the realization that we have only to gain from sharing is invaluable to us. I remained involved with ACT for the rest of last year by attending reunions, and by participating in a number of programs begun by ACT ors. Because of this special weekend in October, I had learned a lot of new things about people in general, and even about myself, and I had learned about ways to use the knowledge I had gained. There has never been a person with nothing to share. Whether you are an off-island freshman or a fourth-year, life-long resident of Charlottetown, please give serious thought to attending ACT VII. I know many people who are glad they did.

Sincerely,
Steve Skutt
