

London Press Strike Settled

By COLIN FROST
LONDON (AP)—London presses rolled again Monday night, turning out news for the metropolitan area's millions, after a one-day strike by 19 workers had led all the 13 morning and evening papers to stop publication.

A settlement was announced, without details, in a joint statement by the Newspaper Proprietors Association and the Printing and Kindred Trades Federation after hours of discussion.

"Conditions of resumption of work," the statement said, "were agreed... as a result, normal production was resumed."

The stoppage was the climax to a feud between two pressroom unions, the National Society of Operative Printers and Assistants and the Printing Machine Makers' Trade Society.

It started last year. Lord Rothermere bought the Daily Sketch from Lord Kemsley and shifted its printing from the Kemsley plant, which employed PMTAs men, to the Sunday News of The World plant, controlled by NATSOPA.

The newspapers affected by the strike normally print more than 20,000,000 copies daily. Two alone, The Mirror and Express, each sell more than 4,000,000 copies a day. Others such as The Chronicle, Mail, Herald and Telegraph are well over the million mark.

Londoners, among the world's keenest newspaper readers, took the strike sadly. Commuters traveled to work and back looking lost without their usual papers.

As a commuter put it: "It's worth splashing a shilling to have some shield against those Monday morning faces."
