

NEWS of the WORLD in PICTURES

Heavily armed police and national guards in San Juan, Puerto Rico, seized Pedro Albizu Campos, alleged master-mind of the attempted assassination of President Truman. Personally directing hunt for convicts who escaped penitentiary in a break believed linked with the Nationalist uprising was Governor Luis Munoz Marin of Puerto Rico, shown pointing. He accused revolt leader Pedro Albizu Campos of directing assassination attempt on President Truman. Albizu surrendered and San Juan feared attempt to free him.

AN ASSASSIN FALLS — At the foot of the steps to Blair House, one of the two men who attempted to blast their way into the temporary home of President Truman lies dead. The man, tentatively identified as Oscar Collazo, was shot by White House guards in a wild gun battle in which three guards were injured and the other would-be assassin shot. Truman, who was inside Blair House, was uninjured. (Photo by NEA-Acme staff photographer Charles Corte).

Search continues for two occupants of a plane believed to have crashed off the south shore of Manitoulin Island, Ont., but police have virtually given up hope that they are alive. Louis Sivinski, 31, above, a pilot for Lau-Goma Airways, and Miss Ruth Dunoon, 40, of Owen Sound, Ont., were aboard the Fleet Canuck when it took off from Tobermory. Following day, pontoons of the plane were found washed up on the shores of Timber Bay. Two planes and a boat have scoured the area but could find no trace of the occupants of the plane.

Mrs. Rose Collazo, wife of Oscar Collazo, one of the would-be assassins, is shown talking with reporters in New York following incident at Blair House. Mrs. Collazo, when told of the shooting, denounced the president for "not keeping his promise to give Puerto Rico its independence."

Pineapple worker is typical of Puerto Rico's working people, many of whom follow the Nationalist leader who served a term in U.S. prison for 1936 revolt attempt.

END OF ASSASSINATION ATTEMPT — One of two men who tried to force their way into Blair House lies in the shrubbery around President Truman's temporary residence. Both men were shot, this one killed. This man was tentatively identified as Grisello Torresola, of New York. Note the German Luger pistol (arrow) at the man's feet. Three White House guards were wounded in the gun battle. Photo by NEA-Acme staff photographer Charles Corte.

RED NEMESIS — "Ego" a young mascot with the South Korean 1st Division, shows what — given the chance—he would do to the Communist enemy. The well-fed youngster is holding a Russian-built "burp gun." NEA-Acme photo by Staff photographer Ed Hollman.

PRESIDENT'S DEFENDER — A White House policeman is shown on the ground at Blair House, Washington, after he and two other officers were wounded in a gun battle with two would-be assassins. The guards killed one and wounded the other. (Photo by NEA-Acme staff photographer Charles Corte).

WASHINGTON DRAMA — White House policeman Donald Birdzell grimaces in pain after being wounded by bullets in exchange of gunfire with would-be assassins outside Blair House, President Truman's temporary residence. Two other guards were wounded, one gunman slain and the other seriously wounded. (Photo by NEA-Acme staff photographer Charles Corte).

REVOLT REMAINS—The bodies of two anti-American Puerto Rican Nationalists lie in the courtyard of La Fortaleza Palace. They were shot by police during an attempt to assassinate Gov. Luis Munoz Marin. Munoz's office is directly behind the UN flag on balcony.

AMBROSE O'MALLEY Found Boy's Body
Alex Yankovitch, 13, was released to the custody of his parents in Madawaska, Ont., after admitting to police he killed Teddy Rose, 10, a hunting companion, by accident. Police quoted the boy as saying: "He was my best friend. I didn't mean to shoot him. I tripped over the root of a tree and the rifle went off. I was terrified when I saw he was dead, so I hid his body under the stump of a tree." When Teddy was found missing, a search was begun which lasted 3 days, involving 300 civilians, police, dogs and airplanes before the body was found.

WITHOUT CONCERN — Showing no visible concern, President Truman speaks at Arlington Cemetery, Arlington, Va., less than an hour after two gunmen tried to shoot their way into his temporary residence, Blair House, in Washington. He is speaking at the unveiling of a memorial statue to British Field Marshal Sir John Dill.

The North Atlantic treaty defence ministers, meeting in Washington, called at the White House to hold conference with President Truman, and here is the chief executive extending a double-handed welcome to two of them. Left is Randolfo Pecciardi, Italian defence minister, and centre, Britain's Emanuel Shinwell. Shinwell told newsmen that there is "no evidence" that Russia intends to launch a shooting war, but added that the Atlantic powers must arm against any risk.

Armed guards stand by some of the convicts from Rio Piedras penitentiary in Puerto Rico, following their recaptured after the week-end mass prison break of 107 of the prisoners. Governor Luis Munoz Marin declared he was convinced that the mutiny in the jail and the influence of Communist agitators have a direct link with the recent National uprising. Pointing out that many of the prisoners were Nationalists jailed for previous anti-government activity, a spokesman said that the break was obviously planned to divert police.

MAC'S MAN FRIDAY — William J. Sebald, 48, of Baltimore, Md., chairman and U.S. member of the Allied council for Japan, has been appointed permanent political adviser to Gen. Douglas MacArthur with the rank of ambassador. A former U. S. Navy captain, Sebald became MacArthur's temporary political adviser in the fall of 1945.