

Soviet Scientists Is Dedicated Has Few Personal Problems

By ROY ESSOYAN
MOSCOW (AP)—Nikolai Ginnadich Bassov at 35 a doctor of technical sciences and one of the Soviet Union's promising young physicists, says:
"Science is my whole life."
Bassov is one of an estimated 25,000 Soviet scientists engaged in research in 163 major scientific institutions supervised by the Soviet Academy of Sciences.
He is happy, enthusiastic about his work. His future is assured and as he proceeds up the ladder of his career the chances are high the few personal problems he still has—such as housing—will be removed.
The Soviet Union's best scientists live in preferential housing—up to seven- or eight-room apartments, with a summer house in the country thrown in—and have the use of one or two cars, a marked privilege in Russia.
Bassov has not reached that

SOLDIER-POET DIES
TORONTO (CP)—Alexander C. (Al Pat) Joseph, 71, known to Canadian veterans as the Irish soldier-poet, died in hospital here Monday. representative of housing available to the average Russian in Moscow.
The Lebedev Institute of Physics where he works is building apartments for its employees and Bassov expects to move into a three-room apartment soon.
This will be the first big material change in his way of life since he started his career 12 years ago.
Bassov's intensity and devotion, both as a scientist and a Soviet citizen, is reflected in his strong, cramped stratum yet.

CRAMPED QUARTERS
He lives in two small rooms with his wife, three-year-old son and both his wife's parents.

were hard for all. Bassov entered the army after 10 years of schooling, in 1941.
Demobilized in Moscow in 1945, Bassov immediately entered the Institute of Physical Engineering here.

After completing the basic five year course, Bassov won his "candidate of sciences" degree—about equivalent to a master's degree—in 1953, and two years later his "doctor of technical sciences," the somewhat tougher Russian equivalent of a Ph.D.

His education was not only free but was cushioned by a state allowance from start onish.
GOOD INCOME
His income now, as a doctor of technical sciences, is 3,700 rubles. His wife still works, and this brings their total income to 4,850 rubles, or over $1,200 a month.
By comparison, a factory manager earns 4,000 rubles and up.
But this is nowhere near Bassov's potential ceiling. As a professor, the next highest Soviet academic rung, Bassov could earn 6,000 rubles.

Bassov has no set hours at the institute. With 15 assistants working under him, he is his own boss.
"Sometimes we have to throw him out at night, just so he'll be fresh the following morning," a friend remarked.
In his position Bassov receives nearly two months' vacation a year, double the national average.
Not having attained the "dacha" level—the summer house in the country that is one of the perquisites of an established Soviet scientist—Bassov takes his wife and son to his parents' home in Voronezh, near his birthplace, every summer.

He reads English and some German. He hesitates to speak in either. He reads much of his foreign scientific literature in the original, and uses the vast state-operated scientific translation service at the disposal of all Soviet scientists mostly for references.
Both Bassov's parents are still alive. His father, in his early 60s, works at the Institute of Forestry. Bassov was asked whether his parents are religious, as so many of the older generation in Russia still are. He didn't like the question. "I don't know," he said at first. "It's hard to say."

After a moment's thought, he said, "we never talk about it. I'm pretty sure they're not."
And then, by way of explanation, he added "After all, they're cultured people."
