Many View Comet Jet At Moncton

A big silver colored aircraft that now holds the spotlight in aviation circles around the world landed at Moncton airport yesterday and gave hundreds of people their first view of the R. C. A. F.'s new four-engine Comet jet transport. The R. C. A. F. became the first airforce in the world to fly these aircraft, and the first to fly a Comet across the North Atlantic. On the last lap of a trans-Canada familiarization flight, the big jet aircraft from Ottawa, spent three hours in Moncton yesterday, and members of the press and radio from various points of the Maritimes held a press conference with the captain and crew members shortly after their arrival, and were shown through the big aircraft. Cutting through greyish-white clouds that hung over the airport, the big jet appeared over Moncton before 10:00 a.m. (AST) and after making a long sweeping pass over the station came in on what an R. C. A. F. pilot described as surprisingly slow landing speed, and taxied up to a position in front of the T.C.A. building with equal apparent ease. Viewed from the outside the plane is of conventional design except for the four jet engines (two on each wing set close to the body of the plane, the other larger propeller type engines. Other notable exceptions include a large tail assembly; a long nose extending beyond the wings; and two four-wheel undercarriage units, which, besides having a high breaking efficiency, reduce runway stress by spreading the load over a larger foot-print area. The comet is powered by four De Havilland "Ghost 50" turbo-jet engines, each of 5,000 pounds rated static thrust. The plane has a gross weight of 115,000 pounds, wing span of 115 feet, length of 93 feet, height of 28 feet, a cruising speed of 465 miles, and a range (at gross weight) of 3,000 miles, and fuel capacity of 7,000 imperial gallons.

The De Havilland Comet type aircraft was first flown in July, 1949, and marks the breakthrough from the piston-engine propeller-driven aircraft which have served the airways of the world for a third of a century. At a step it increases the speed of travel by more than half. The big jet left Moncton at 12:20 and flew low over the R. C. A. F. Station at Summerside on its way for a 25-minute visit at St. John's, Newfoundland, then to Gander for a three-hour visit. Leaving Gander at 6:30 the plane was due in Montreal one hour later. From Montreal the return flight to its home base at Ottawa was scheduled for this afternoon.

Federal Gov't

"The second proposal which was extended to me," he said, "was the extension of the fishing season to very sympathetic to such a plea but I must, however, remember the primary responsibility of the Department of Fisheries and that is to preserve and protect all the fisheries of Canada, so that each year in the future, fishermen may be assured of full catches, and if we have extensions of fisheries in any season beyond the rate of production, then you are going to have small catches in the years ahead, and that is a very false economy. So far the actual landed weight has been less in weight but greater in value than last year. I promised the Premier and I promised the fishermen groups that I met today that we would have a careful check made on the landings up to the end of the fishing season, and if landed weights are down, then we will extend the season, but if landed weights are not down then I don't feel that I would be discharging my duties as Minister of Fisheries, if I permitted an extension of the season to catch more than the actual fishery will bear."

Referring to the carapace measurement of lobsters he said that he had been at Tignish during the day and there had watched scientists measure a full catch of lobsters which the fishermen had brought in. Two-thirds of those lobsters were undersized. "That to me means," he said, "that you are very close to the point of catching small lobsters. You are getting down to the same situation which prevails when you over fish a lake, and that is what has been behind the desire to get the lobsters to a little bigger size. It may mean a slightly less catch in this year, but in the years ahead it will mean a bigger landing in terms of weight. If at the end of the season, the results don't justify the continuation of these measures they will be abandoned. If they do prove, on the other hand, that they do justify, they will be continued."

Mr. Sinclair said he had been criticized for doing so much more work for the west coast fisheries than for the Maritime Provinces. He contended that this was not so. He assured the fishermen of the three Maritime Provinces that he would do as much for them as he would do for the fishermen of Newfoundland and British Columbia.

"It is my hope to do as much for the fishermen," he said, "as James Gardiner has done for the farmer."

Mr. Sinclair paid high tribute to the work of his parliamentary assistant, Mr. MacNaught. He said that his himself was quite familiar with the fishing conditions on the west coast but would be the first to admit that he knew very little about conditions of the east coast and "that is why I. Watson MacNaught has been a very great help to me and to the government."

In dealing with the problems of fishermen he pointed out the great difficulties that fishermen have in credit extension. Unlike the farmers, he said they cannot get easy credit. Up until recently he pointed out, they could not get insurance.

Mr. MacNaught had spoken to him about the great need for insurance on the west coast and decided that there was a real need for an insurance scheme for the fishermen of the east coast. Private insurance companies, he pointed out cannot touch them, administration costs are too high. He said he found this could be gotten around by using fishery officers. So far as an insurance scheme for fishermen whereby they can get insurance at one per cent a year on boats valued up to $7,500.00.

"This," he went on, "is only a first step, because a fisherman with a boat worth one thousand dollars when he insures it pays $10.00 a year in insurance. If the boat is lost we pay him sixty per cent of the value of the boat ($600.00). He still has the problem of securing the other four hundred dollars and that is where the need for credit arises. We have discussed with two of the chartered banks of Canada the possibility of extending to fisherman a credit similar to that which the farmer receives under the farm improvement loans.

And, he said, he hoped that in a year's time the scheme would be in such shape that the department would be ready to go ahead with a fisherman improvement loan act which will do as much for the fishermen as the farm loan act for the farmer.

He spoke of the loss of gear which is more crippling than the loss of boats. He said he had thought of delaying for a year this phase of insurance until the matter was studied more fully.

Miss Winnifred Bamber from the Union of South Africa was guest speaker at the Summerside High School auditorium last evening, when Guides, Brownies, Leaders, members of the local association and parents were present. Introduced by the District Commissioner, Mrs. T. L. Linkletter, the speaker gave a most interesting talk on the Guides and Sunbeams (Brownies) of South Africa explaining how they had to learn about two flags, also how different their camping life was as they had no lakes, rivers or trees. However they did locate a camp site in an orange grove near a national game reserve. Miss Bamber described the wild life in Africa, the elephants, zebras and hippopotamus. By means of illustrated pictures she showed much of the work done by the children of Africa, many of whom are colored. The Guides and Brownies greatly enjoyed learning an African song taught by the speaker. On display were the dolls and scrapbooks used in competition for the Bessborough Shield, the winner of which was Mrs. Charles Linkletter's company. These will be on display here next week.—S.
