Tignish H&S Hears Address On Importance Of Guidance

TIGNISH — M. F. Hagan, Charlottetown, provincial president of the Prince County Health Association, addressed the October meeting of the Tignish Health and Sanitation Association at a meeting held at the home of Mrs. M. F. Hagan.

His references were to the changing curriculum, and emphasis on guidance. Mr. Hagan said while the annual he was informed of his transfer from the department of health to the department of education, as a guidance counselor.

Mr. Hagan was introduced to the meeting by Sister St. Mary Arnold spoke on the importance of this help in the early grades. The principal of the school, Rev. M.J. Rooney and Rev. David MacLeod, Sister St. Thome read the minutes of the previous meeting, and the financial report was given by the treasurer, John Hackett.

Hospital workers may strike Said by P.C. Comm. The executive officers of the five local unions voted to petition the Charlottetown and District Labor Congress and the Canadian Labor Congress to immediately organize a Prince Edward Island strike of Public Employees in regard to RCMP criticism about low wages and standards of living of hospital employees.

Lord Home (Continued from page 1) The Times said Butler and Maclean had reserved their positions. Meanwhile, the Conservative member of Parliament for a Scottish border constituency, Cdr. C. E. M. Donaldson, deferred his seat Friday to Home to enable him to get a seat in the House of Commons without delay.

Legislation Planned On Top Killers

Agriculture Minister Andrew B. MacRae said yesterday, as the result of the death of approximately 70 head of cattle in the province was guarded by one backbench MP, Robert Jenkins, reflected the widespread dislike of the idea of recruiting a premier from the House of Lords in the face of a driving threat by the Labor party.

Home, a right-winger who served as foreign secretary since 1960, originally was considered an outsider in the race but gained ground after stiff right-wing opposition developed against Butler.

Political sources said Home was taking on probably the toughest job ever to face a post-war Conservative prime minister in this century.

Home, if he succeeds as expected in selecting a cabinet, may call a general election before October, 1964.

An advocate of a firm but flexible policy toward the Soviet Union, Home's elevation should be well in Washington where he visited President Kennedy two weeks ago.

But friendship in Washington is not likely, say Home critics, as it has been generally disappointed in his quest for the premiership. He was passed over by Macmillan when Sir Anthony Eden, now Lord Avon, resigned in 1957.

Supporters of Butler—including many cabinet members—were disappointed that Thursday night when they learned Home would be offered the premiership but that he apparently stymied by the fast-moving action Friday.
