Seen above is historic St. John's Presbyterian Church at Belfast, where the 130th anniversary of its erection was observed yesterday. Church also is the beautiful cemetery which is among the best cared for in the Province. This cemetery marks the last resting place of many famous sons of the Belfast district.

Memories of the past were revived at the 130th annual memorial service of historic St. John's Presbyterian Church, which took place yesterday afternoon. Rev. James E. Heathwood, M.A., conducted the service. Special preacher was Rev. W. E. Dudley, D.D., L.L.D., of Granby, Mass. Taking as his subject "Upon our yesterdays we build our tomorrows," Dr. Dudley emphasized the importance of sentimentality in daily living. "It is a grand and glorious thing," said the speaker "to come together and remember our past. He recalled his own ministry of several years ago in a New Park Church where he became well acquainted with Rev. Dr. Malcolm James MacLeod, a former minister of 5th Avenue Presbyterian Church whose resting place is now in the cemetery adjoining St. John's Church, Belfast. In making reference to the sacrifice and determination of the hardy pioneers who hewed for themselves a home from the forests, Dr. Dudley expressed the hope that, to the younger generation growing up, the memory of these men and women would serve as an inspiration to go on to better things. "In those days," said Dr. Dudley "if the minister through illness could not be in the pulpit, there was always an elder who could take his place for Sunday and proclaim the gospel to his brethren." Dr. Dudley noted that the faith of these rugged individuals has been a sustaining factor throughout the years that have followed. "Life is a challenge," he said, "and if we are to keep alive the spirit of God, we cannot afford to allow the church to go by default." "Should we go too far in restoring the past?" asked Dr. Dudley. He pointed out that there was a decided difference between sentiment and senses and went on to show that when David received the water from the well outside the walls of Bethlehem, at great risk to the finest soldiers he had in his army, he took the water and poured it on the ground. The preacher told the congregation that if their forebears could come to life and give them some word of advice, he believed that they would be told to "March On." "The church," he concluded, "will get its strength for the future not only from the accomplishments

Island Odds and Ends

The large new show building at the Exhibition Grounds had a grand opportunity to prove its usefulness, although it has yet to receive the finishing touches. Throughout the rain-spattered week the cattle show ran its course under brilliant lights and before enthused audiences, mostly aloof from the weather which interrupted the horse-racing.

Through the seating accommodation has yet to be installed, people flocked to the large arena absorbed in the cattle show and judging. Some of them found seats in temporarily erected stands but the great majority stood at ring-side for hours, proof of their keen interest in the very fine exhibits of livestock.

They crowded the Coliseum too, when rain forced the transfer of the vaudeville acts from trackside to the show arena, and there is a possibility that hereafter the Coliseum may become the permanent home of the vaudeville entertainment, leaving the race track in sole possession of the horse racing. A minor attraction held in an unfavorable outdoor location to one of major drawing-power and appeal.

Any other uses the Coliseum may be put to in the future will be an extra dividend over and above that expected of it. Already it has more than justified its construction.

It is no secret that the Exhibition owners are thinking of building a new concrete and steel grandstand. It is planned to merge it with the Coliseum so that the two will become a single unit. This is the reason for locating the Coliseum directly behind the present grandstand. It is possible that entrance to the track will be by way of the combined grandstand and Coliseum. On rainy days a wide concourse leading directly from the track to the Coliseum, will be a pathway to shelter for thousands of people. The completed Coliseum will seat 3500 and the show ring will have standing room for at least as many more. If present plans go through, the improvements from a spectator's point of view, will be obvious.

When it is completed Charlotte-town's new Federal Building will be a push job. A representative of the Foundation Maritime Company, who was in Charlottetown a few days ago, and whose company will bid for the contract on the building, is authority for this statement. He explained that marble and terrazzo would be liberally used in the building's construction, and that on completion it would compare favorably in size and attractiveness with other large buildings in much larger cities.

The personnel manager of T. Eaton and Company Mr. Chapman of Moncton was in Charlottetown during Exhibition Week, looking over the prospects of securing help for the new Charlottetown store expected to open next March or April. He had with him more than three hundred applications for positions from Island men and women. The new store will have a staff of about one hundred and seventy-five. The Company does not hire people beyond the age of forty-five. Mr. Chapman made only preliminary investigations of the experience and background of the many applicants, and will not make final selections for several months.

Two of the Exhibition officials who worked tirelessly last week to make the show a success were Cecil Stewart and "Bob" Borden, the latter a newcomer to the board of directors. With great patience and courtesy these gentlemen—using the secretary's office as their headquarters, unravelled a hundred tangles having to do with the cattle exhibits and accommodations and just about any job that came to hand. They were jack-of-all trades, and stood not on their dignity, no matter what they were called on to do.

Manager H. J. Kennedy praised both for their unselfish and sustained efforts to keep the show rolling.

Two Cardinals Take Part In Closing Ceremonies Sunday Of Marian Congress

By BERTRAND THIBAUT Canadian Press Staff Writer

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP)—Canada's two cardinals Sunday took part in ceremonies here marking the closing of the national Marian congress.

James Cardinal McGuigan, Archbishop of Toronto, told a crowd of pilgrims devotion to the Virgin Mary will bring to the world the peace which it so sorely needs, while Paul-Emile Cardinal LeGer, Archbishop of Montreal, cautioned Roman Catholics to be on their guard against communism.

Earlier faithful who packed the exhibition grounds in this city heard a message from Pope Pius XII broadcast from Castle Gandolfo, Italy, and relayed to them over loud-speakers.

Closing ceremonies were held in Trois-Rivieres across the St. Maurice river from the shrine at Cap De La Madeleine, Que., to accommodate additional pilgrims who have arrived steadily throughout the week-end. The congress has been going on since Aug. 5.

CROWNING CEREMONY Later Valerio Cardinal Veneri, the papal legate, officiated at a ceremony in which a gold crown studded with diamonds was placed on the statue of the Virgin of the Cape.

Speaking in French Cardinal LeGer said materialism is the greatest evil now menacing the foundations of civilization.

"It attacks the church, persecutes Christians and wants to replace the Kingdom of God with a human paradise that it describes as a powerful society from which even the memory of God will have disappeared.

"This ceremony of the crowning of the Virgin is a call for vigilance and penance. The deadly enemy of the church is at our gates and it wants to destroy our institutions and draw our people towards atheistic communism."

Cardinal McGuigan, who spoke in English, said if Catholics have a true devotion to the Virgin they can change the world and bring it the peace "it so desperately desires but which it will not obtain without God's help."

False moral outlooks, rivalries and quarrels were the order of the day at present.
