

Sow Dresser Rebuilding Shocks Returning German

By JOHN O. KOEHLER
DRESDEN, East Germany (AP)—My return to my former home town, now a part of Communist East Germany, was my most shocking experience since the end of the Second World War.

I remembered Dresden enveloped in flames and smoke. I remembered the delayed-action bombs exploding periodically. I remembered the stench of death.

That was 18 years ago. Today the smoke and flames and stench are gone. But otherwise the city looks much as if the air raids had struck only yesterday.

Fire-blackened ruins stretch for miles north and south along the Elbe River and westward to the foothills of the More Mountains.

Only a small area in the city's center has been rebuilt. The Communist regime has put up blocks of department stores and shops around the Altmarkt Square and along a nearby street.

Some prefabricated four-story apartment houses have been put up among the ruins. The regime also has reconstructed some of the architectural masterpieces of the Baroque period but gave Dresden the nickname of "the Florence of the Elbe."

TOURISTS SHOWN BEST
These are places Communist guides show tourists as examples of Communist accomplishments.

But tourists are not taken to the suburbs. And they have no chance to talk to the people.

"The government now says the city will be rebuilt in 1969," said a construction worker.

"Nobody here believes it. The headline is being advanced from year to year."

At Postplatz Square, once the hub of city life, people waited for rickety pre-war streetcars. Their faces reflected the same downheartedness I saw 18 years ago. Their clothing was nearly as shabby as in 1945.

At Postplatz Square is the Communist restaurant, across the street from the Communist Karl Marx Strasse and pride of Communist "reconstruction."

"Socialism will win," said a poster above the entrance to a grocery store I visited. No fresh fruit or vegetables were available.

"Peace through socialism," protected another poster near a dairy which had no milk, no eggs, no butter. "Butter is rationed to a half pound a person a week," said the salesgirl, adding in a lower tone of voice: "If we have it."

"Through increased productivity to socialism," said still another slogan at the butcher shop. It had sausages for sale but the only fresh meat was steaming beef, mostly fat, at 4.99 marks ($1.20) a pound.

COMMUNIST PARADOX
For lunch I went to a Hungarian restaurant, across the street from the nearly empty food stores. It was like walking into paradise—another paradox of the Communist system.

The restaurant, a little more than a year old, was built in a style as modern as anything I had seen in the West. And for 12 marks ($3) I had most salad, veal cutlet with a paprika sauce, Hungarian white wine and coffee. The meat was the best I had during a week in East Germany.

For 15 minutes through the sea of rubble to the suburb where I grew up.

The house in which I had lived was destroyed in air raids and at the site there was a big construction project.

I explained to the workmen that I lived there 18 years ago. I asked what they were building.

"An electric power station," answered one of the men.

"Yeah," sneered another, "we've been building it for years." They told me construction began more than three years ago. Up to now, only the foundations have been completed.

Steel said: "First-half production will be at least 57,000,000 tons, perhaps as much as 60,000,000. Either way, it will be up substantially from the 54,100,000 tons produced in the first half of 1962."

Steel said: "Steel production will be at least 17 per cent more than the first quarter unless quick developments on the labor front eliminate the threat of a summer strike by the United Steelworkers."

Steel consumption alone will require a 10-per-cent increase in steelmaking and in inventory building will do the rest, said the metal-working weekly. This would boost the industry's second-quarter output to a minimum of 31,000,000 ingot tons, compared with 26,700,000 in the first quarter, the publication said.

Britain, U.S. Boost Exchange Of Honors

By W. B. RAGSDALE JR.
WASHINGTON (AP)—Britain and the United States have been trading honors and gifts ever since tempers cooled from the War of 1812, but there's never been anything like the latest when Winston S. Churchill and Sir Winston S. Churchill.

Americans hold Churchill in the highest regard of any foreigner since the Marquis de Lafayette joined them in their fight for independence from Britain in 1776.

And until now Lafayette was the last man to be voted U.S. citizenship in 1785.

And when the constitution of the United States was ratified in 1789, Lafayette, along with other citizens of the original 12 states, became a citizen of the United States.
