

Case of Sea Sickness Gave Lucy Best Water

BY NEIL A. MATHESON Provincial-Farm Editor

AN UNUSUALLY bad case of sea sickness in the long ago gave this province its best known writer a name...

Lucy Maud's great, great grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Montgomery were on an immigrant ship that was on the way to Quebec when the captain stopped it off at Princeton...

BUT GREAT, great grandmothers Montgomery refused to go back in the boat when the time came for it to leave...

But I couldn't confirm the part of the story that intrigued me: Mrs. Dingswell insists Lucy Maud had put up a headstone with the inscription at the bottom "Here I am and Here I Stay."

Presbyterian Elders Took Exception?

THE REST of the story is that the old Presbyterian elders took a most serious view of the inscription and called the writer over to look for what might be interpreted as a dangerous departure from the faith of his fathers...

The Mrs. Montgomery of the "Here I am and Here I Stay" incident was had to return to a little kilt that is just across from "The Lake of Shining Waters" at Park Corner...

The land on which the old cemetery was located is owned now by Robert Montgomery. It was told...

THE HEADSTONE placed to her great, great grandmother MacNeill met me at the Guelph Memorial Park and the Montgomery stone I hunted through the old cemetery one day last morning...

I should say here that Mrs. Dingswell tells me it was Mrs. MacNeill, not Mrs. Montgomery, who was the one who decided to have the headstone put up at the Guelph Memorial Park...

Lucy Maud was the daughter of the famous writer Mrs. Dingswell named a daughter Alice Maud; she is now Mrs. Arthur Moore...

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell showed me the "Blue Chest" which Lucy Maud carried about in one of her stories...
