Battle Of

centred on Maritime fisheries and on marketing problems in particular.

CRITICIZES U.S. TARIFF

Mr. Nowland criticized U. S. action in increasing tariffs on imports of Canadian fish sticks—frozen, breaded fillets which usually are pre-cooked.

"I get tired of people saying we mustn't antagonize the Americans for fear of losing markets," he said. The U. S. still needed to import many things from Canada and if Canadians acted fairly they should not have cause for fears.

If the U. S. fishing industry had its way, he added, "it would erect a tariff against us as high as Haman's gallows."

He urged more action by the northwest Atlantic fisheries convention against methods of foreign trawlers which he said are harmful to conservation.

ADVANTAGE NOT OFFSET

A. J. MacEachern (L—Inverness-Richmond) forecast gradual elimination of the New England fishing industry, which he said is the main advocate of high tariffs on Canadian fish.

The U. S. tariffs did not offset the Canadian advantage of being closer to fishing grounds and would only cushion the decline of New England industry.

He said Canada's Atlantic fisheries still are retarded through lack of new investment in equipment, processing and methods of distribution.

Thomas M. Bell (PC—St. John's, Albert) urged more research to increase salmon stocks in the Saint John area.

EXPANSION WANTED

H. J. Robichaud (L—Gloucester) said the fisheries research board should be expanded and its findings made more widely available for practical use. New Brunswick fishing fishermen still used outmoded equipment and methods of their forefathers.

A. Wesley Stuart (L—Charlotte) said transport department regulations governing equipment of boats are too rigid. If fishermen bought all the equipment required by the inspectors there would be little room for fishing gear.

Skippers of fishing boats were being refused masters' certificates because their eyesight was not absolutely perfect. Yet motorist with far worse eyesight were licensed to drive on crowded highways.

A. B. Patterson (SC—Fraser Valley) said there should be greater emphasis on the Canadian market for fish. With 60 per cent of the catch exported, any improvement in domestic demand would mean a great deal to the industry.

Attractive Centennial Hanging Flower Baskets

Observant citizens will have noticed hanging from the service poles on the main thoroughfare of the City veritable hanging flower gardens.

Over a year ago the Decorations Committee of the Charlottetown Centennial Board contacted the Park Administration of Victoria, British Columbia for a description of their hanging flower baskets which it is said are the most photographed of all Victoria's many attractions.

The Committee received the utmost co-operation from the Mayor of the City of Victoria who forwarded full particulars of the baskets and their construction. These were given to Mr. Wilfred Smith of the West End Nurseries of this city, with the very beautiful results in evidence on our main streets.

The baskets are about 15 inches wide and 12 inches deep. This gives a large soil capacity. In fact, the baskets weigh 72 lbs. each, which makes it important that fixtures be strongly made. The baskets are hanging from arms 1/2 x 1 1/2 inch iron clamped to the power line posts, 11ft. high. Notches are cut into the iron 20 inches from the lamp post into which a No. 9 gauge ring fits at the top of the 11 inch long 12 gauge wire tripod on which the baskets hang. The baskets are made of the same gauge wire except 3 circular rings which make up the frame, which is of 9 inch gauge.

To conserve moisture and reduce evaporation, a size 34 tin wash basin painted moss green outside and treated with roofing cement inside hangs under the basket. A strip of galvanized iron 2 inches wide runs around the top of the basket inside the moss and just above soil level. This collar acts as a reservoir and aids water in penetrating to the centre of the basket, while the wash basin acts as a reservoir.

The soil mixture which is a special preparation is composed of peat, sand, rotted loam, lime, hoof and horn, superphosphate and sulphate of potash. The peat is very satisfactory in holding the moisture.

The mounting was made by Bruce Stewart and Co. Limited. The baskets were prepared in the greenhouse of West End Nurseries and hardened off in May and early June.

The flowers in the baskets are principally geraniums, petunias, single and double, Schizanthus, trailing ivy, trailing lobelia, short marigolds. Some other varieties are also included by way of experiment.

The baskets will be maintained by a tank truck and will be watered daily after, or before, business hours.

The whole success of the scheme depends on the reliability and interest taken in the baskets by the gardener in charge. The scheme was made possible

(The possession of trafficking of female was included in the law last year following complaints by police of being unable to reach distributors. Under it a person found in illegal possession of a large quantity of narcotics must prove that the narcotic was not to be used for trafficking. If able to establish this, the accused person still is convicted and sentenced for illegal possession.)

The committee heard testimony of narcotics experts from Canada, the United States, the United Kingdom and the UN, and from Canadian police chiefs and health, welfare and prison officials.

QUESTION ADDICTS

It also held two closed meetings with about 170 addicts in attendance, during which the addicts made representations.

The committee, whose report was tabled Thursday in the Senate, recommended:

1. Establishment of a "special offence with a penalty of the utmost severity" for those illegally bringing drugs into Canada. It said present controls are good but have not stopped the illicit flow of drugs into this country.
2. Changes in the law to provide for prosecution as a contributor to juvenile delinquency of any addict who associates with a juvenile. The committee found no juvenile addict problem in Canada but said young addicts should be segregated from older ones when confined together.
3. Driving privileges be withdrawn for long periods from motorists who contravene the Opium and Narcotic Drug Act.
4. That the provinces take advantage of their jurisdiction to set up treatment centres. This was beyond federal jurisdiction, but any province could legislate for treatment centres on a compulsory or voluntary basis the same as is done for mental patients.
5. NO FREE DRUGS
6. Federal consideration of bursaries or scholarships for training medical, probation and rehabilitation personnel to deal with addicts.

The committee said recognition by the provinces of addicting as a treatment responsibility is long overdue. Effective treatment depended on acceptance of this responsibility by provincial authorities, particularly in B. C.

The report strongly recommended that treatment methods and facilities. Evidence had indicated this should include "humane, supported withdrawal of narcotics from the addicts, medical treatment, post-discharge control, including long-term probation, coupled with the right of immediate return to the institution in the event of relapse."

Legislation to achieve this would need to include compulsory treatment, legal supervision and control over the individual during treatment and the right of control following treatment to prevent the patient from returning to use of drugs. These, the committee said, are matters beyond federal jurisdiction.

"The most effective way of taking the profit out of the drug traffic is by making all trafficking, in terms of penalties, a most hazardous and costly undertaking to the trafficker," the committee said.

Must Tell Why Passport Denied

WASHINGTON (CP)—The U. S. Court of Appeals ruled Thursday the state department may not deny an American citizen a passport without telling why.

"Freedom to leave a country as a hemisphere is as much a part of liberty as freedom to leave a state," the court said in rejecting the state department's claim to exclusive control over the issuing of passports.

The state department has held it would be contrary to the best interests of the United States to grant a passport to the head of an organization classified by the attorney-general as subversive.

British Spurn Malayan Reds' Bid To Talk Peace

SINGAPORE (Reuters)—Malayan Communists have proposed round-table negotiations to halt the seven-year jungle war but British authorities rejected the plan. It was disclosed Thursday night.

A letter from the Communist high command dated June 7 declared its forces "will never be defeated" and suggested immediate talks of all responsible political parties in Malaya to obtain Malayan independence "through peaceful means."

Lt. Gen. Sir Geoffrey Bourne, British director of Malayan military operations, Thursday night described the proposal as "a typical Communist peace offensive aimed at spreading confusion." He said the Communists could end the war immediately by accepting the liberal terms of surrender already offered them.

Bourne maintained that the Communist forces have in fact been defeated and "defections from their ranks are occurring almost daily throughout the federation."

Official figures published June 3 estimated the terrorist forces have been slashed from 4,000 to 3,500 since 1951. Up to last January, 5,448 had been killed, 2,472 wounded and 1,518 had surrendered.

The Communists demanded that emergency regulations imposed at the start of the war in June, 1949, be abolished after hostilities cease.

"We are of the opinion that the representatives of various political parties, guilds, associations and communities should endeavor to hold a round-table conference at an early date to discuss thoroughly the problems of ending the war and achieving peace and independence in Malaya.

"Despite the thousands of methods adopted by the British government to liquidate us, it has failed to do so, and neither has it defeated us in war because we

Fr. Jas. Donahoe Succumbs At 84, Priest 51 Years

Funeral services were held Monday in St. Bridget's Church, Minneapolis, for Fr. James Donahoe, 84, founder and first pastor of the parish who died in St. Mary's Hospital June 2 after an illness of several weeks.

A priest for almost 51 years, Fr. Donahoe was at one time city missionary of St. Paul and the first delegate to the National Conference of Catholic Charities in Washington.

Son of James Donahoe and Mary Quinn, James Donahoe was born September 16, 1870, at Rosemeath, Prince Edward Island. He attended the district school until he was twelve years old, then worked for a while on his father's farm.

In November, 1891, he came to Independence, Ia., where he worked for a time in a hospital. It was during that time he decided to prepare for the priesthood and he returned to his home in September, 1895, to begin his studies. He entered St. Dunstan's College and was invited by the late Archbishop Ireland to affiliate with this archdiocese.

He entered the St. Paul Seminary in September, 1900, and was ordained in June, 1904.

He said his first Mass in All Saint's Church at Cardigan, E. P. E. I., was in 1904. He celebrated his Golden Jubilee Mass in that Church, June 20, 1954.

Msgr. James M. Reardon, now pastor of the Basilica of St. Mary, preached then as he did at Fr. Donahoe's golden jubilee Mass and at his funeral.

Fr. Donahoe's first appointment was to the old Church of Immaculate Conception in downtown Minneapolis. It was

Fr. Donahoe established St. Bridget's parish in June, 1915. A small frame church was built that year and dedicated by Archbishop Ireland on November 21. In 1919 the rectory was built. The combination church and school was opened in 1922.

The first church became too small as more and more Catholics moved into the district, and the auditorium of the new school was thereafter used as a church.

In 1930 the convent was built for the Benedictine Sisters who teach in the 12-room school.
