

Controversial Novel Ruled Not Obscene

OTTAWA (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada has ruled in a 5-4 decision that D. H. Lawrence's controversial novel, Lady Chatterley's Lover, is not obscene and does not represent an exploitation of sex.

The court's majority decision means that the book can be sold anywhere in Canada, including Quebec where it has been subject to a court ban since June, 1960.

The five judges who ruled that the novel—the story of a love affair between an English noblewoman and a herdsman—was not obscene, said that no significant segment of the population is likely to be corrupted or corrupted by reading the book as a whole.

REVERSED JUDGMENT

The court's majority decision reversed judgments by Judge T. A. Fontaine of Montreal and the Quebec Court of Appeal that

Physical Fitness Program Over-Supplied With Funds

OTTAWA (CP)—Health Minister Monteth said here today that the $5,000,000 allocated all of the $5,000,000 will simply not be possible to allocate all of the $5,000,000 which was earmarked by Parliament last year for the new national fitness program in the fiscal year 1961-62.

He cautioned that just because money is available does not mean it should be spent merely for the sake of spending. Any program undertaken by Parliament required a good deal of time setting up the machinery to operate it.

"We have been moving ahead quickly in this respect but it will simply not be possible to make all the arrangements necessary for the effective use of the whole $5,000,000 by March 31," he said.

The health minister was addressing the annual athletic banquet at Carleton University.

HAVANA (CP)—Cuba's important sugar harvest continues to lag behind government goals, figures published here showed.

For the week ending March 5, cane on the ground totaled 13,187,560 metric tons—only 74 per cent of the goal.

The Newspaper El Mundo writes that while the responsibility to solve food supply problems is enormous, it's no less important to fulfill goals of the sugar harvest.

Mr. Monteth stressed, however, that the national fitness program is not just a "rush and to promote amateur

Diabetic Association Plans Unique Questionnaire Drive

TORONTO (CP)—Diabetics which can go for years without detection, probably lurks in the family tree of 300,000 unaware Canadians.

The Canadian Diabetic Association has just opened a unique questionnaire campaign to obtain it out and establish records of heredity that may provide a clue to its cure.

Forty years after the hormone insulin was isolated, thus saving millions of diabetics suffering from death, the key to its cure remains a mystery.

One thing is known, however, that although diabetes is not contagious, it is hereditarily hereditary. It is to distinguish the heredity pattern that 25,000 questionnaires will be available on request to 200,000 known diabetics in Canada.

Dr. W. R. Peasby, honorary medical director of the Canadian Diabetic Association, initiated the "family tree" analysis.

Dr. W. R. Peasby, honorary medical director of the Canadian Diabetic Association, initiated the "family tree" analysis. The project will be headed by Dr. Charles Best, codiscoverer of insulin.

Although he says he does not expect to live to see all of the project will reveal, Dr. Best says he is confident it will reveal many of the condition's mysteries.

In simple terms, diabetes is a defect in a person's body in which sufficient insulin is not longer available. As a consequence, all body-building materials are prevented from functioning.

The final result is total decline of the patient's constitution resulting in death unless the insulin is replaced.

Two Canadian Women Seek Voice At Geneva Meeting

By ALAN HARVEY

GENEVA (CP)—Two "desperately respectable" Canadian women are trying with some persistence to make the voice of their sisterhood heard at the 17-nation conference on disarmament.

Mrs. Therese Casgrain and Mrs. Georges Roy, both of Montreal, visited External Affairs Minister Green to preach their message of peace.

They flew here Saturday from Montreal as representatives of the 6,000-Strong Voice of Women organization formed after the collapse of the Paris summit meeting in May, 1960.

The group has recently received national publicity in Canada. Its aims are to promote a climate of opinion throughout the world that will assist the attainment of peace.

Mrs. Casgrain and Mrs. Roy called on Green as the Canadian minister was preparing his speech for today's session of the disarmament conference. He did not comment.

Mrs. Casgrain, widow of Pierre Casgrain who was a cabinet minister in the Mackenzie King government, is national vice-president of the organization. Mrs. Roy, a lawyer's wife and mother of four children, is publicity chairman.

MEMBER DELAYED

A third member of the delegation, Mrs. Andre Laurendeau, sister of Montreal, is to come to Geneva after visiting her daughter who is studying at the Sorbonne in Paris. Mrs. Laurendeau has six children.

Mrs. Casgrain added that she didn't know where to begin in the campaign to convince delegates attending the disarmament conference that somehow something must be done to establish mutual confidence among nations.

Armed with a list of addresses, she began to make the rounds of delegates here for the conference, which so far has given little indication that any breakthrough on disarmament is imminent.

"You may laugh at our naive but we are meeting an unusual situation and we want to take unusual means of getting our point across."

"I know people may think we are silly to think that we can achieve anything, but we must try. We are just people of good will, desperately respectable."
