RUSSIA'S MOVE STILL DISCUSSED.

It Frustrates Emperor William's Plans.

THE UNITY OF THE ALLIES IS SEVERELY TESTED.

Russia Looked Upon with Suspicion
by the Powers.

[SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER.]

LONDON, Sept. 1.—In the absence of further news from China, the papers are again filled with discussions of the Russo-American proposals which, so far as may be gathered from representatives of opinion in the various European capitals, are calculated to subject the unity of the allies to an exceedingly severe and dangerous test.

In Germany especially those proposals are so diametrically opposed to the Emperor William's policy that they have produced something like consternation. As the Daily Mail editorially remarks:—

"Count Von Waldersee was assuredly not sent to assist in restoring the Empress Dowager."

"It is recognized on all sides that Germany's decision is the pivot of the matter."

"Emperor William intended by despatching Count Von Waldersee to have the master hand in the Chinese settlement."

"Russia has taken the wind out of that officer's sail, and is now posing as the friend and protector of China."

"The morning papers express the greatest suspicions of the intentions of Russia."

The Times' editorial which fairly represents the opinion of all, says:

"The advantages of Russia's policy are not manifest and it is very doubtful whether it will recommend itself to powers like England and Germany that have a large commercial interest in the establishment of state and progressive Government to replace the reactionary clique which has impeded all progress and development in China in recent years."

"To withdraw from Peking would be interpreted as proving not only that the allies are cowards, but that they are hopelessly divided."

"It may be that some of the powers will withdraw, but that does not imply that others are bound to leave Peking and to acquiesce in the restoration of a Government guilty of a gross international crime."

WHAT GENERAL MILES SAYS.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—That the acute stage in the Chinese situation has not been reached is the opinion of General Miles. He regards it as quite possible that a general conflict of the powers may result from the conflicting interests in China, and believes that an attempt on the part of some of the powers to partition the Celestial Empire among themselves would be sufficient ground for the United States to resort to force.

DEATH AND TURMOIL.

Description of the Conditions at Tien Tsin After Its Capture.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press)

TIENTSIN, China, July 17.—The ancient stone walls of the Chinese city of Tien Tsin, surrounded on the days of its occupation by the allied troops a square mile of such filth, ruin and death, such turmoil and pillage that history could hardly duplicate. Under normal conditions the place was no better than a huge cesspool festering with the accumulated rubbish and slops from a population of nearly a million people packed into a labyrinth of hovels. It is the carnation of all the suffering horrors and waste of war. The European soldiers where they fought their way up to the walls saw flowing in the canals and ditches outside dozens of Chinese slain by their own people because they had refused to fight. The bodies were headless and their hands were tied behind their backs. The heads were discovered afterwards. Rows of them decorated the outer wall.

Five flags were flying from the high walls when this newspaper correspondent entered—British, America, French, Japanese and Russian. "It was hard enough to get those flags up there," remarked a foreign officer, "but the real trouble will be to get them down."

The suburbs of the city presented a forest of what was inside. Shells had torn the huts and ploughed the ground, while the dead men scattered among dead horses, pigs and dogs; testified how thoroughly the bullets had swept the region the day before. The sights inside compelled respect for the fighting qualities of the Chinese. Their dead were everywhere. Dressed in the coarse blue coolie blouse and trousers decorated with characters guaranteed to render them invulnerable to foreign bullets, they were strewn all along the top walls where they had fallen. Walking a quarter of a mile along the embankment the bodies averaged one in ten feet and the wall was nearly ten miles long.

Throughout the city the demolished houses and hundreds of killed gave evidence of how vastly more effective had been the foreign shell fire within the walls of the city than the Chinese bombardment of the foreign settlement, which, lasting for a month, had killed only a dozen people. The viceroy had constructed in the palace yard two comfortable and impenetrable bomb-proofs, excavations guarded by sandbags, but the Chinese people were lying dead in the streets, torn to shreds. The living populace were utterly indifferent about their dead. They would not drag the bodies out of the streets, or even cover them over.

Most remarkable of all the sights was the looting of the city. The middle of the place was like an ant-hill, kicked open. Chinese swarmed everywhere, thousands and thousands of them diving into the flames of the burning shops, getting under falling walls and into choking clouds of smoke. Most of them were half naked, grimy with smoke and sometimes dripping with blood. A Chinese appearing with a prize must fight his way, other Chinese sprang upon him and clutched his plunder. They rolled among the corpses, pulling and tearing, while children being trampled down cried for help and the mob poured right over them.

The palaces, the mint, the pawnshops, the stores of silks, furs and jewelry were the objects of attack.

Near the middle of the city was the most prosperous pawnshop, an institution that had probably existed for centuries. Wealthy Chinese were accustomed to store their winter clothing there for safe keeping. When the doors were battered down the mob flowed in like a tidal wave. In a twinkling all was pandemonium. Two forces collided in the gateway, a rush of Chinese struggling to enter and another line fighting to get out with great arms of loot, while an occasional soldier went through the crowd. The looting flourished for three days. On the first day it was entirely unrestrained. Many white people accumulated stacks of goods by simply standing at the city gates and holding up the best laden Chinese from the endless procession that flowed out. Pack-horses, carts, rickshaws, coolies loaded with trunks and sacks and piled with loose silks, furs and bronzes, crowded all the roads leading down to the settlement. On the second day a conference of commanding officers decided to adopt repression measures. The commanders, excepting the French, empowered the British, who were doing provost duty, to seize all loot. The official statement was that all seized loot would be held, the proceeds to be divided among soldiers as prize money. Today the walled city looked as though a tornado had struck it. Enough valuable property has been destroyed to stock a big city and enough seized to give every soldier a considerable sum if the distribution is honestly administered.
