Unusual Potato Vessel In Port

The "City of New York", a ship built in 1885, is at present in Charlottetown receiving a cargo of Prince Edward Island potatoes bought by James H. Lambkin of Atlantic Traders, Halifax.

The ship was built in Norway and was outfitted for work in the Arctic sealing fields. Because of her suitability in working in the colder regions of the world, both Captain Roald Amundsen and Admiral Richard Byrd used her as a supply ship in their Antarctic expeditions.

During the last war the "City of New York" was intended for use as a patrol ship by the American government which took her to Quebec for conversion. The plan was abandoned and Captain Kennedy, her owner and skipper, purchased her. Since then she has been used as a trading schooner travelling mainly to the West Indies. In 1947 she was converted to diesel power.

The reason for her use in the potato trade is her construction. The heavy timbered sides, which resisted so well the battering of huge ice flows, will allow the temperature of the holds to remain considerably below that of the water outside. The cargo has been purchased mostly through Mr. H. B. Willis.

FLYING NURSERY HAS TROUBLES

BOVENGDON, Hertfordshire, England, June 7—(AP)—A flying nursery which left California six days ago landed today with its disoriented, weary load of 40 wives, 38 children, and seven husbands. Most were irate at air travel technicalities which shuttled their airliner—chartered to bring British war brides back with their children for a holiday—from California to Connecticut, then to Miami, Havana, and Newfoundland before crossing the Atlantic.
