When enlargement of the lymph nodes occurs without pain or tenderness, it is often a grave symptom. The swelling is then often due to some type of tumor formation in the lymph nodes, or to some blood disease such as leukemia.

Any person with an enlargement of the lymph glands that persists for three weeks or more should have a complete examination in order to determine the reason for it. Whatever the cause, lymph gland enlargement signifies disease, and the person with this condition should consult his physician about it without delay.

Home Accidents

Properly screened, saucapan handles should be turned to the back of the stove, matches and firearms should be kept out of reach, burning rubbish should be well supervised and cellar, attic and store rooms should be cleared of rubbish and inflammable material.

To prevent falls by children, babies should never be left alone on tables, in the bath tub or in the crib with the sides down. A gate placed at the top of the stairs will prevent small children from falling down. Stairways and floors should be kept free of unnecessary articles, such as toys, mops and brooms. If anything is spilled on the floor it should be wiped up immediately.

Hazards for very small children should be removed. These include such things as thimbles, nails, buttons and marbles which may be swallowed, open safety pins and sharp articles such as knives, scissors and tools.

A telephone is a great convenience but not much use if you don't know where to phone in an emergency. Put the following numbers near it in a conspicuous place: fire and police, hospital, doctor and if children are left with a baby-sitter, the address and phone number at which parents may be reached.
