The Five Year Plan played their last game of the regular intramural "B" division basketball season last Tuesday against AVC. The FYP secured one last win beating AVC by a 10 point margin. The victory was enough for the team to take sole possession of second place going into the post season. Currently FYP's arch nemesis, Dream Team 4, is in first place. FYP will play their first game of the playoffs this week against the Corduroy Warriors.

In other FYP news, Mr. Hands has mysteriously disappeared. The disappearance comes at a difficult time as the team is gearing up for its drive to the finals. Police would not comment on the disappearance except to say that Dico Reyers has been pulled in for questioning. Reyers and Hands have had at best, a tense relationship. Reyers would not comment on the incident as he left the police station. Instead, Reyers decided to use his limited sign language skills to tell the media what he thought.

The newest person to grace the halls of the FYP Cultural Centre is fellow columnist Bawb the Ambitious News Guy. Bawb started frequenting the Centre earlier this semester and wouldn't leave. Instead of provoking a conflict, which would go against the FYP philosophies and Rustico Buddhism, Bawb has been named an honorary member.

Finally, the FYP have decided to give their seal of approval to V.P. Operations candidate Tim Willis. Acting team spokesman Dave Christian commented "Dammit, if Tim Willis can't bring in good bands, he'll entertain you himself."
