THIS COULD BE THE ONLY COPIER YOU'LL EVER NEED!

It's made by SCM—and that's a good enough reason for expecting the best. It's called the SCM '44' Electrostatic Copier. It can make as many as ten copies up to 11" x 17" in size automatically from a single original. Copies colour, pencil, ball-point—anything—perfectly. Six seconds per copy for pennies apiece. What copier could do more? That's why the SCM '44' could be the only copier you'll ever need.

New Treatment Is Developed In Eye Ailment

TORONTO (CP)—Two University of Toronto ophthalmologists have developed a fast, effective method of treating detachments of the retina of the eye.

One of the ophthalmologists, Dr. D. H. Dickson, described the method in a paper read to the Canadian Electronics Conference. His partner in the work is Dr. Michael Shea.

The method involves use of a very low temperature probe called a cryostylet, developed by Ralph Crump, vice-president in Engineering for Frigtronics, Inc., of Bridgeport, Conn.

Dr. Dickson told the conference that more than 100 patients have been treated with outstanding success.

The cryostylet consists of a series of transistors attached to a tip and cooled by Freon gas. It was developed from a device first used to extract cataracts. The cataract stuck to the probe the way a wet tongue will stick to a cold skate.

EXPLAINS METHOD
A university spokesman explained that to use the device the surgeon rotates the eyeball to a position where he can introduce the probe behind the eyeball and over the area where the retina is detached. He can see the eye tissue form into a ball of ice as he works.

When the lesion melts, it begins to heal.

Dr. Dickson said retinal detachments operated on with this instrument heal in five or six days, compared with the three weeks needed for another treatment, photocoagulation.

In many cases the patient can walk into the operating room and out of it.

Only a drop of local anesthetic is needed.

WANT WISER POLICE
LONDON (CP)—The home office is to spend £350,000 on police recruiting by the end of 1965, a 50-per-cent increase over 1964. Men and women with good educational backgrounds are the target of the new advertising campaign, says a letter to local authorities.

Eaton, Employee Seek Decision On $100,000

CLEVELAND (AP)—Cyrus Eaton, Canadian-born million air industrialist, and a former employee, Harold Hobson of Seymour, Ind., have gone to federal court to see who has the right to collect a $100,000 debt which now totals about $100,000.

Hobson, president of the Seymour Manufacturing Co., asked the U.S. District Court here more than a year ago whether he Eaton, a native of Pugwash, N.S., hold legal rights to collect a loan of $12,500 Eaton made in 1930 to Frank Hobson, then an official of the Cleveland Trust Bank.

Frank and Harold Hobson are not related.

The case is being heard without a jury before U.S. District Court Judge Girard Kalbfleisch.

Eaton made additional loans to Frank Hobson and, by 1935, the amount had climbed to $27,500. With interest, it now is estimated at $100,000.

GAVE BONUS
Harold Hobson, who left Eaton's employment in 1941, said collection of the debt was given to him as a bonus by Eaton shortly after Frank Hobson died in 1935.

Frank Hobson's estate, which consisted in part of Cleveland Trust Co. shares, went to his wife Julia, who died in 1961. About the time of her death the bank stock was worth an estimated $300,000.

Also in 1961, Harold Hobson settled the debt out of court with Frank Hobson's heirs for $45,000, which included interest on the original loan made by Eaton.

In 1962, Eaton filed suit in Cuyahoga county common pleas court to collect the debt, which he said was still owed to him.

About a year ago, Harold Hobson asked U.S. District Court for a declaratory judgment on who had the right to collect the debt.
