Why Simpkins Was Shook.
"Simpkins, you know," said the fat man, "has an idea that he's a wit, and he's all the time springing quips on people he knows. Most of them is chestnuts, but once in a while he gets off a new one. He got off a new one to his girl the other night, and that's why he lost her. It seems that he was up to her house, and they were sitting out on the veranda. She got to telling him about an adventure she had that afternoon when she was down town. It seems that she was coming along Main street up by Tupper, and a little poodle dog ran across the street with a policeman after it. Just as it reached the middle of the street, the policeman pulled out his pistol and fired at it. The ball went through the dog's lungs, and it dropped over dead."
"The girl was telling this, and she said: 'When I saw that poor little thing lying there dead, I just couldn't help going over and picking him up. It seemed too bad to leave a great big brute of a policeman kill such a lovely little dog, and I told him so.' Right there is where Simpkins got in his fine work. 'You picked him up?' he asked her. 'Yes,' says she. 'And he was shot in the lungs?' he asked again. 'Yes,' says she. 'Well,' says Simpkins with a sober face, 'that wasn't quite the right thing to do, was it?' 'I should like to know why?' says the girl. 'Because,' says Simpkins, 'if he was shot in the lungs, he had a hole in his past.'"
"That settled it with Simpkins," continued the fat man. "The girl shook him then and there."—Buffalo Express.

She Had Seen the Wild Man.
An attempt at a practical joke which had some real humor in it and which resulted in a laugh for all hands was that which, according to an English newspaper, a certain Mr. Krewskin endeavored to play upon his wife. This story is to the effect that as Mr. Krewskin was going home one day at noon he saw the wagon of a traveling photographer standing by the roadside. "I will stop and have a few pictures taken just for fun," he mentally remarked, entering the establishment. He was as good as his word. He sat for his pictures—tintypes, doubtless—and flattered himself that he looked his best. When the sittings were over, the operator showed him a proof.
"There," said he, "I think this is a pretty good likeness."
Krewskin looked at it and finally said, "It'll do." When he got home, he showed it to his wife and told her it was a picture of the "Wild Man of Borneo" that was on exhibition at the town hall.
"You can't fool me," said his wife, examining the picture critically. "I've seen the Wild Man of Borneo, and he's not half so ugly and frightful looking as this."
Doubtful Congratulations.
"Well, old man," says one, "how's business?"
"Splendid!" says number two. "I've just got a commission from a millionaire. He wants his children painted very badly."
"Good! I congratulate you, my boy. You're the very man for a job like that."—Elytonian.

The Children of the Rich.
When there were children, conspicuous among them the vulgar little children of the not long rich, repulsively disagreeable to the eye in general, but pathetic in the eyes of thinking men and women. They are the sprouting shoots of a tree, being never destined never to enjoy, because they will be always able to buy whatever men fight for, and will never learn to enjoy what is really to be had only for money; and the measure of value will not be in their hands and heads, but in bank-books, out of which their managers have been bought with mingled affection and vanity. Surely, if anything is more intolerable than a vulgar woman, it is a vulgar child. The poor little thing is produced by all nations and races, from the Anglo-Saxon to the Slav. His father was happy in the struggle that ended in success. When it grows old, its own children will perhaps be happy in the sort of refined existence which wealth can bring in the third generation. But the child of the man grown suddenly rich is a living misfortune between two happinesses—neither a child of the rich nor of the poor, neither the satisfaction of the one nor the pleasures of the other; hated by its inferiors in fortune, and a source of amusement to its ethio and aesthetic betters.—From "A Rose of Yesterday," by Marion Crawford, in the Century.

Modern Burglary.
Jim—Got the tools all here, Bill?
Bill—Yes.
Jim—And the dynamite capsules and the smokeless bombs and the non-detonating powder?
Bill—Yes.
Jim—Then get out the Crook's tube and we'll see what's inside the vault before we go any further.

She Succumbed.
"Am I the first you ever loved?"
"No, you are not. But if you'll be my wife you shall be the last."

Very Remarkable and Extraordinary Events Have Occurred to Victims Who Have Succumbed to the Mania For Taking Out a Policy

The high importance of life insurance has become so generally realized of late years and policies are held by so many thousands now that it is scarcely strange that there are many wonderful stories in this connection, says London Tid-Bits.

A very remarkable case occurred to a Sheffield greaser a few months ago. Having a wife and three children dependent upon him, and not making sufficient current expenses, he decided to take out an insurance upon his life for the protection of his family against disaster in the event of their being suddenly robbed of his support. He applied to a good company, went through the usual formalities and awaited the result.

A few days later, after having closed his shop for the night, he was sitting in his parlour over the shop when he heard the postman's characteristic knock. He threw down his paper and hurried down stairs. When in the middle of a long, steep flight his foot slipped and he was forcibly precipitated down the balustrade of the stairs into the hall. The remainder of the stairs hit the hall below, where he struck his head heavily against a metal letter box, which caused a concussion of the brain, from which he died in the course of a few days.

The extraordinary feature of this story, which sounds like the daring fiction of a penny-a-liner, is the fact that in the letter box at the time of the accident was the life insurance policy for which he had just been delivered by the postman, to whose knock he had responded. In point of fact, it is placed within the pale of suspicion by its source, would be hard to beat.

There are many similar cases of accidents being proved. Only last summer a gentleman who was on the following day to have started on a mountaineering tour through Switzerland, tending down his paper and hurried down stairs. When in the middle of a long, steep flight his foot slipped and he was forcibly precipitated down the balustrade of the stairs into the hall. The remainder of the stairs hit the hall below, where he struck his head heavily against a metal letter box, which caused a concussion of the brain, from which he died in the course of a few days.

Retraction and Apology.

Str.—Some time ago I felt very much annoyed because I and my friends could not have our own way at an annual meeting held in Winsloe Hall, and feeling very angry over our defeat, I gave vent to a mental and physical action that produced the article recently issued in the Patriot headed "Winsloe Jottings." I do confess that I felt cutting any and everything, so long as I did not commit myself. Since then, however, I have not been able to sleep very well, and after a careful perusal of my physical condition, I have come to the conclusion that my trouble is a matter of conscience, which makes me resolve with the beginning of the new year that I will be more guarded in my jests and statements than I have been in the past. Mother says that is what she has been looking for. And, Mr. Editor, you may think it strange that I must retract some things in my former letter, but when conscience speaks let all other powers be silent. You know, only part of the truth told motion that of its best qualities. I am sorry I referred to the "doctor" and "butcher," for I hear that a person gets into a very unpleasant position through making hasty remarks in respect to some butchers. Again, I said about all I thought of was to make money, but I have changed my opinion since that, and agree with the old proverb that a good name is to be chosen rather than great riches, and with this conviction, I feel like putting the truth before your readers concerning the annual meeting referred to, and which, a few days ago, I labored so hard to misrepresent, by telling part of the truth only. But when one is self-willed and cannot have their own way it is then I try to do the square thing. It was I and my friends felt like having a new batch of trustees, but the rest of the shareholders said "No," and commended the trustees for their past services, and made a motion that they be elected, which was put to the meeting by the chairman and carried by two-thirds of a majority, the chairman calling the ballot himself, declaring them elected. I see now that I was fairly beaten, and should not have said the chairman went to another road to get his Orange friends to vote him back to office; and particularly so when I know some of my friends did all the canvassing they were able to do, and even went off their own road to get a Conciliator; but, unfortunately for us, this addition proved to be a windmill, and it was from furious gusts of wind from this source when the chairman said he would not hear another word against the mode of election by ballot. And now, Mr. Editor, that meeting has put me in a thinking mood, and I have been thinking of that gentleman I called Old Tupper. I never thought much about him before—I have been following my party through right and wrong; but in this I was wrong. I now believe that Tupper is a statesman of no mean order, who assisted in framing and controlling a policy that has cherished and protected Canada, given her honor and wealth, and given her thrift, and I must have been to vote for Lavies, who has no real policy, or if he has it is the policy of scattering with the shovel that which the political fathers gathered with a rake. And when I predicted the possibility of Mr. Peters coming home in time to use this new form of ballot in order to secure his election, I failed to mention that this form of ballot fairly and squarely exhausted the vote of the shareholders, though at the time I did not like the mode, yet I must acknowledge that the principle was fair enough; and when Mr. Peters contests this district I shall not vote for him unless he will produce a policy, assuring me that he will make revenue and expenditure meet, for the present annual system of piling up debt or adding deficit to deficit reminds me of the capital of Ireland—'dablin' every time; and with this state of affairs threatening financial ruin, I believe I shall turn Tory and assist in whistling "God save the Queen," but "Save us from financial ruin."

Liberal-Conservative Meeting

A meeting of the Liberal-Conservative Association of Cherry Valley Poll was held in the Schoolhouse a short time ago for the purpose of re-organization. Mr. Edmond Murphy was appointed Chairman and the undersigned Secretary. After the retiring officers had given an account of the work of the Association for the past year, the election of officers for the ensuing year followed—resulting in the re-election of the former officials, with the exception of the Secretary, Mr. Wellington Young declining re-election for a second term. The officers are as follows:—
President—Edmond Murphy.
First Vice-President—Edward Fraser, Sr.
Second Vice-President—Martin McInnis.
Secretary—Seymour Young.
Also a working committee of five members.
Messrs. Fraser, Young, and others, in discussing affairs in connection with the Association, commented on the political situation of to-day, and pointed out the urgent need of vigorous and united action on the part of those electors who have the good of their country at heart, and wish to see the Island saved from the ruin that will inevitably follow a continuance in power of the present extravagant government.
A resolution was next offered by Mr. W. J. Young, who remarked that as a number of electors of this district had requested Mr. A. McLean of Charlottetown, and Mr. Henry Wood of Pownal, to become nominees for candidates at the next Conservative Convention, and it being understood that they have consented, he therefore moved—
Resolved, That this meeting tenders Messrs. McLean and Wood their hearty approval, and in the event of their being nominated as our candidates, will give them our unanimous support.
The motion was seconded by Mr. Fraser, and carried.
A vote of thanks was then tendered the chairman and the meeting adjourned.
The next meeting of this Association will be held soon after the Charlottetown Conference, and of which due notice will be given.
SEYMOUR YOUNG,
Secretary.

Prominent Business Man of Peterboro Cured of Eczema.

Mr. Thos. Gladman, bookkeeper for Adam Hall, Eq., stove and tinware dealer, Peterboro, writes the following facts:—
"I have been troubled for three years with Eczema on my leg, and at times the itching was something terrible; tried many eminent doctors and was pronounced incurable when I was recommended by Mr. Madill, druggist to try a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I am happy to testify that after using two boxes I am completely cured."
At Persian funerals the mourners are supplied with wads of cotton, which they use to wipe away their tears. The cotton is afterwards collected and squeezed, and the tears are bottled and preserved. They are supposed to possess restorative qualities in fainting fits.

Are you a Public Speaker?

If you cannot find anywhere a preparation to equal DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LIMESEED AND TURPENTINE for the throat and respiratory organs. We have hundreds of testimonials from One who speaks, singers, ministers and others. One gentleman says: "I never think of entering my pulpit without Chase's Syrup of Limeseed and Turpentine at my side." Such indications from the ministry should give confidence in Dr. Chase's Medicine.
If you are troubled with that tickling sore throat, so common among speakers and singers, you will find DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LIMESEED AND TURPENTINE a positive and permanent cure. As has been reported by persons who seek to injure us, and for whom we care not in the least. Nor did we locate in this city on speculation. We came here as we had been advised that there was an opening for our class of work. Our office we engaged by the year. Does that look like Travelling Dentists?

Now, what we are coming at is this: Certain persons have been making cheap talk about us. We can stand it all, and such talk does not worry us in the least, it is simply funny. You can always find us at work in our place of business, and ready for business.
