

Home, School Ass'n Meeting At Montague

The regular meeting of the Montague Home and School Association was held last night in the new high school with the president, Mr. Ralph Beck presiding.

After routine business was taken care of, it was announced that the association was sponsoring the Shur-Gain Amateur Cavalcade program which is to be held in the Theatre this week.

The president brought to the attention of the members that great progress was being made in the construction of the auditorium and that a considerable amount of money will be needed.

After an enthusiastic discussion concerning various means of raising money, it was moved and adopted that the association pledge $500 towards the purchase of chairs.

Mr. Jack Hughes, principal of Montague School, passed around some report sheets which he said were to be mailed to parents as a report of the progress of the students.

Senator McIntyre Urges Chignecto Canal Project

The importance of construction of the Chignecto Canal in conjunction with the St. Lawrence Seaway was emphasized in the Senate Chamber on February 3rd by Senator J. P. McIntyre.

"I understand that this great project the St. Lawrence will be financed partly by New York State and Ontario for power purposes, and by the United States and Canada; and I believe the major part will be paid by the tax payers from all parts of Canada. In the Maritime Provinces we have a project that has been talked of for one-half century, not for one century, nor two centuries, but for 200 years, since the days of the first Acadian settlement—the Chignecto Canal; but it was not until 1822 that the first practical steps were taken. A survey was made in that year, and according to competent engineers of that day the project was feasible and desirable.

However, nothing came of this until the pre-Confederation negotiations of 1864 and 1866. This was one of the inducements held out, along with others, if the Maritimes would join Confederation. The idea of Confederation was initiated by Ontario and Quebec, and it was done for the purpose of settling a long outstanding dispute between those provinces. The statesmen of Ontario and Quebec knew that Confederation could not be complete without the cooperation of the Maritime Provinces, so they resolved themselves into a delegation and proceeded to the Maritimes. Among the delegates were Sir John A. Macdonald, Sir George Cartier, George Brown, Sir Charles Tupper and other notables. The convention was held in Charlottetown on September 1, 1864.

ADVERSE CONDITIONS "The delegates were well aware of adverse conditions under which they were to meet. They knew that the Maritime Provinces had established a satisfactory trade among themselves, that their markets were close at hand and easy of access, and that traffic to these markets was mainly by sea. Our American neighbours bought all the lumber, fish and agricultural products that the Maritimes had to offer. In fact, before Confederation the United States was not only our nearest but our most profitable market, and after Confusion these markets would be lost. "To offset this, certain inducements were held out to the people of the Maritimes to consent to Confederation: a better and more profitable market, that of the central provinces, might be substituted therefor; the coal of Nova Scotia was to find a market in Toronto; the fish, lumber and agricultural products were to find a market in Quebec and Montreal.

"But as time went on it was found almost impossible to fulfill these promises, and it turned out that the coal of Nova Scotia did not find a market in Toronto, and that the fish, lumber and agricultural products did not find a market in Quebec and Montreal. In the meantime, the New England markets had been lost. And this is one of the reasons why the Maritime Provinces are lagging behind the rest of the provinces of Canada.

SHORTER WATER ROUTE "With the construction of the Chignecto Canal, the markets between the Maritimes, the central provinces and New England, would be shortened by an average distance of 368 miles; for instance, from Charlottetown to Boston, 442 miles; from Montreal to Joggins, Nova Scotia, 640 miles; from Summerside to Portland, Maine, 511 miles; from Saint John, New Brunswick, to Pictou, 553 miles; from Newcastle to Saint John, 612 miles, and so on. This would provide cheaper water transportation for the products of these three provinces. In fact, construction of the Chignecto Canal was a definite pledge prior to Confederation.

"In 1887, the Government led by Sir John A. Macdonald called for tenders for the construction of the Chignecto Canal. The Government of the Honourable Alexander Mackenzie included the project as an item in the budget on two occasions, but nothing was done.

"Again, in 1930, a Royal Commission was appointed by the Mackenzie King Government to inquire into the project, but in that year his Government was defeated, and nothing was done. About a year later the Government led by R. B. Bennett appointed its own commission of inquiry, but still nothing was done; and nothing has been done up to the present time.

"Now that the St. Lawrence Seaway is assured—which when completed will be of incalculable benefit to the central and western provinces—is it not reasonable for

Senator McIntyre Urges Chignecto Canal Project

The people of the Maritime provinces to demand that the Chignecto Canal be constructed without further delay, as an extension of the St. Lawrence Seaway?

"The building of the Chignecto Canal in conjunction with the St. Lawrence Seaway, on which large amount of money is to be spent, would give the Maritimes a short route to the New England States. I think it is up to the members of the House of Commons and Senators from the Maritime Provinces, to stand together and fight to have this long overdue and important project, promised at the time of Confederation, made a reality.

PROVINCIAL INDEBTEDNESS Senator McIntyre went on to point out, from figures compiled by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, that at the end of 1952 or the first part of 1953 the provincial debt of Canada's ten provinces rose in one year by $279,622,000 to a total of $3,145,004. On a population basis this worked out to $218.33 for each person in Canada, an increase of $13.37 for that year. It may be, he said, that the tax rental agreements should be revised to give the provinces more rent. According to the statistics, British Columbia had a per capita debt of $240, Alberta of $118, Saskatchewan of $198, Manitoba of $181, Ontario of $299, Quebec of $162, New Brunswick of $340, Nova Scotia of $280, Prince Edward Island of $181, and Newfoundland of $101.

"The Provincial Governments," Senator McIntyre said, "may feel that we have no right to discuss their financial position. However, as representatives of the people in all parts of Canada, we must realize that this situation cannot go on year after year. If it does the inevitable result will be either that the provinces will be unable to sell their bonds or they will have to realize greater revenues from increased taxation."

He went on to cite a tribute paid by the Opposition leader in the Senate (Senator Haig) to the present Prime Minister as the man who initiated action for the making of the Atlantic Pact. He concluded as follows: "My hon. friend from New Westminster (Senator Reid) spoke about the cold war and said that we are living in a troubled time. We are living in the time of a cold war and also of a shooting war. Do honourable members not think it is time that the people of the whole world looked somewhere for divine guidance. Should we not look to the leadership of the Pope, the head of the great Catholic Church; to the leadership of the great Protestant Churches; to the leadership of all other churches? Let them bind themselves together and tell the warring nations to stop their wholesale slaughter of men, women and children, stop their racial and religious intolerance before the whole human race sinks into the common grave of disease, death and destruction."

Dreams Come True for Couple, 65

Retire on $200 A Month. A popular Quebec druggist and his wife recently retired on $200 a month for life. Their dreams of security and comfort have come true, thanks to a decision the druggist made in 1925.

It was then he took out a Confederation Life Insurance Pension Plan which included $20,000 insurance protection. He had just opened his store... and with the baby and the payments on his home, he had only so much left for retirement plans. It was a pleasant surprise when his Confederation Plan told him how easily his dreams could come true—without risks or investment worries.

You'll be pleasantly surprised too at how easily you can make your dreams come true—and protect your loved ones at the same time—with a Confederation Life Pension Plan with insurance.
