Expectation

By
F. H. MacArthur

Silent and frozen, the lakes and the rivers,
Snow-drifts are sweeping the plains white and cold,
While murmuring sadly the pine, tree shivers,
Waiting for Springtime its buds to unfold.
When shall the robin, mating and singing,
Rest in his branches with wings unfurled?
When will Summer, with warm breath clinging,
Spread her green mantle all over the world?
Sadly I muse of the wild winds weeping!
Fate bids me watch 'til the months flee away.
Always in winter nature lies sleeping,
Ever cold breezes spring lies dwelling.
When will the south-wind, laughing and blowing,
Call back the song-birds as Winter must close?
When will the Summer, with joy overflowing,
Nurse in her bosom the tulip and rose?
