MODERN TELESCOPES.

The Great Progress Made in the Manufacture of Instruments.

In an informal address before the Boston Scientific Society Mr. Alvan G. Clark, the famous telescope maker, spoke of the telescopes of the earlier astronomers, among them that of Galileo, who was the first one to apply this instrument to celestial observation, showing some of the difficulties under which the earlier opticians labored. The difficulty lay in the fact that in its passage through the lens the light of the stars becomes separated into the different colors of which light is composed, and each of these colors comes to a different focus within the telescope tube. This results in confusion and injury to the image. The first step was the invention of the reflecting telescope, different forms of which were made by different men, in the manufacture of which delicate processes were undergone, and with which some remarkable results were achieved. Mr. Clark explained the means whereby the other opticians tried to avoid this dispersion of light by means of long tubes, and paid tribute to Dolland, the English optician, who first gave to the world the achromatic objective. In this combination of lenses the imperfection of the image is eliminated to a large degree by the use of a second lens, the imperfections of which are equal in amount to those of the first lens, but opposite in quality or direction.

Mr. Clark reviewed briefly the story of the increase in size of the telescopes, a story of exceeding interest, since this increase has come to us mainly through the efforts and efficient work of the firm of which he is now the sole remaining member. The aperture of fifteen inches was for many years the maximum, but of late years, with increased facilities for the manufacture of large discs and experience in the handling of the same, the aperture of telescopes has been rapidly increased, until we have now the great Lick telescope of thirty-six inches and the still larger lenses of forty inches diameter, upon which he is now at work. This increase in aperture, in connection with the sharpness of definition, which by the care of the optician of these days is possible, gives great opportunity for the use of high magnifying powers, and it is estimated that the Lick telescope is capable of showing at least one hundred million stars. Mr. Clark's address dwelt briefly upon the manufacture of the glass, the careful methods of shaping the lenses, the elimination of the spectrum colors and many other points of interest, showing that the work of the lensmaker demands not only great and delicate mechanical skill, but also artistic feeling of high order.

COLOR HEARING.

Dr. Colman's Interesting Theory About the Relation of Sounds to Colors.

John Locke's blind man, who hazarded the guess that the color scarlet was probably something like the sound of a trumpet, is generally thought to have simply spoken according to his lights, or rather lack of lights, but it appears from Dr. W. S. Colman's articles on this subject that we have now laid the foundation of a science of color-hearing. The term is defined by him as applying to the special case in which a color sensation is excited by some auditory stimulus—as, for example, by the pronunciation of the vowel sounds. It is not a matter of association, as in the case of the "shrill squeak" evoked by the filing of a saw or the drawing of a slate pencil down a slate. Dr. Colman estimates the number of people who possesses the faculty of color-hearing as under 12 per cent., and mentions a case described by Flournoy, in which the vowel "i" awakened the impression of an orange circle with an "i" in black in the centre.

Theophile Gautier, under the influence of hasheesh, heard the sound equivalents (whatever they may have been) of various colors. The notion is, at all events, of respectable antiquity. Dr. Colman cites as believers in color-hearing Hoffman, Goethe and Hans Sachs, and refers to the case of St. Catharine, of Siena, who had a "bright red color sensation whenever she saw or thought of the Host." The Lancet, which comments learnedly on Dr. Colman's theories, feels disposed to think that the red ribbon which adorns the dark-blue bonnet of the members of the Salvation Army is a parallel case, and not difficult to explain on the principles of conventional metaphor.—London Daily News.

The Baron Munchausen.

Southey wrote to Sir Walter Scott, "Of Baron Munchausen I can tell you something. Some years ago in London I was a little startled at hearing a foreigner ushered under this title into a musical party. As this naturally led to enquiries on my part, I was referred to the gentleman himself, who very good humoredly told me he was the nephew of the celebrated Baron Munchausen, who was a minister under Frederick of Prussia.

"It seems the old baron was a humorist, who after dinner, especially if he happened to have any guests who were likely to be taken in by his marvels, used to amuse himself inventing or relating such marvelous adventures as are contained in the volumes which bear his name. He added that his uncle was in other respects, a sensible, veracious man, and that his adventures were only told by the way of quizzing or amusing society.

"A starving German literatus, whose name I have forgot, who knew the baron and thought he had been neglected by him, compiled the book in revenge, partly from the stories of the baron, partly from other sources, and partly from his mother wit. It proved a good hit for the bookseller, as the baron's name and humor were well known, and by degrees made its way into other countries as a book of entertainment."—Familiar Letters of Walter Scott.

Antiquity of Advertising.

Advertising is not an outcome of modern necessity, but is a very ancient practice. The British Museum possesses a collection of old Greek advertisements printed on leaden plates. The Egyptians were great advertisers. Papyrus leaves over 3,000 years old have been found at Thebes describing runaway slaves and offering a reward for their capture; and at Pompeii ancient advertisements have been deciphered on the walls. Thus, a business man, by inserting an advertisement in this paper, will not only command a larger trade, but he may be perpetuating his name and his occupation forever.

Consider Arcturus.

Arcturus is the brightest of the fixed stars visible just now. In round numbers its distance from this planet of ours is 19,000,000,000,000 miles, or 11,500,000 times the real distance of the sun. As to radiating power Arcturus is equal to 5,198 such suns as ours is; its diameter is estimated at 62,350,000 miles. When one ponders on these things and looks at that twinkling point far away in space what trifles he of coal strikes or the failure of the strawberry crop!

Gratifying Report of the Dominion Health Bureau—Forty per cent. fewer deaths in Canada last year than ever before.

OTTAWA, June 25—The last report of the Health Bureau here contains the highly gratifying intelligence that the death rate in Canada during the last year was lower than in any previous year since Confederation, being within a fraction of forty per cent. lower than the best year ever before reported. Closer examination reveals that the greatest decrease was in deaths from Bright's disease, Diabetes, Dropsy, Heart disease Rheumatism and other diseases caused by disordered or diseased kinneys. Further investigation shows that where the cases of such diseases have decreased, the people have within the year made free use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Consequently it is safe to say that the falling off in Canada's death rate is due to nothing but Dodd's Kidney Pills.

OUTLOOK FOR WAR.

How it is Viewed Because of the African Situation.

A late London cable says: Ever since May peace has only been indifferently preserved between the French and Belgian officials in the Ubanghi country. Their relations have been growing steadily more strained, and no one will be surprised if the news of a collision come out from that quarter before the tidings of France's new martial resolves have penetrated it. These conditions raise into prominence the question whether Belgium will persist in trying to hold Ubanghi or will abandon it to the French. Upon that, of course, everything turns, and that will be determined by England and Germany. If they put themselves behind Belgium and say to the French, "Hands off Ubanghi" then we shall be landed squarely on the threshold of the great war. If the crash is coming naturally the Egyptian problem will occupy the foremost place among pretexts for complication. Everybody in Cairo, it is reported, believes that the problem has entered a new and mysterious phase. The Khedive embarked on Saturday from Alexandria for Constantinople. The most plausible explanation in the public mind is that the Sultan has been coerced by the Franco-Russian combination into an open anti-English attitude, and, moreover, has been persuaded that the Egyptian question is to be immediately brought forward for settlement on new and anti-English lines.

As a result of the boycott of the American Railway Union upon the Pullman Car Company, all the switchmen in the freight yards of the Illinois Central went out at 6.10 on Tuesday evening. The boycott orders, which became effective the following day at noon, marks the beginning of what is expected will prove to be the greatest struggle between capital and labor ever inaugurated in the United States. Late at night all suburban trains on the Illinois Central were abandoned on account of the trainmen, who are members of the American Railway Union, joining the switchmen in their strike.

Indisputable.

Why spend $1 for a bottle of medicine for a complaint when one box of Beecham's pills, costing only 25 cents, will cure nearly all known diseases?
