MR. AND MRS. GEORGE W. BOYLE

Lovely Autumn Wedding Is Solemnized In Kensington

Baskets of mixed gladioli and vases of dahlias made a beautiful setting for the marriage of Linda Margaret MacLeod and George Wallace Boyle at the Kensington Presbyterian Church recently.

The bride is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold MacLeod of Irishtown, and the groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Boyle, Hunter River. Rev. E.H. Bean, minister of the church and the Rev. Ralph MacCaull of Sheet Harbour, cousin of the groom, officiated at the double ring ceremony. Mr. Gordon Murray, Kensington was in charge of the wedding music, and accompanied the soloist, Mr. Norman Hall, Hunter River who rendered the solos, "O Perfect Love", and "The Wedding Prayer".

The lovely young bride who was given in marriage by her grandfather, Mr. Heath MacLeod, wore an elegantly simple gown of white peau de soie, in street length, styled with a full skirt, fitted bodice and long tapering sleeves, and featuring a large bow at the back. Her shoulder length veil was held in place by a crown accented with rhinestones and seed pearls and she carried a crescent bouquet of red sweetheart roses.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Ian MacCoubrey, the bridesmaids, Miss Janice Millar, a friend and classmate of the bride, and Miss Muriel Boyle, sister of the groom, all wore dresses identically fashioned of peau de soie in Autumn colors. Mrs. MacCoubrey's was gold. Miss Millar's rust and Miss Boyle's green. Each wore matching shoes and mitts, and tiny hats of maribou also matching their costumes. The three carried nosegays of yellow mums.

Mr. Ian MacCoubrey of Cavendish was best man. Mr. Wendell Boyle of Hunter River, brother of the groom, and Mr. William MacLeod, Irishtown brother of the bride ushered the guests to the guest pews, marked with a miniature bride and groom and blue ribbbon.

Following the ceremony a reception was held for 75 guests at Lake View Lodge, Cavendish. The toast to the bride was proposed by the Rev. Mr. Bean, and the groom fittingly responded. A telegram extending best wishes from the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Carlyle MacEachern, Montreal, was read by the best man.

Mrs. Harold Heaney circulated the guest book.

Following dinner the bridal party and guests moved to the lounge, and the three tier wedding cake made by the bride's mother was cut and passed to the guests by the bride while the groom passed napkins.

The bride's mother was becomingly gowned in brown wool with beige maribou hat and matching accessories. Turquoise net over nylon was the pleasing choice of the groom's mother, with matching hat trimmed with maribou. Mrs. William Buchanan, maternal grandmother of the bride, wore a green and gold crepe with a green velvet hat. Her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Heath MacLeod, chose blue with black and white accessories. and the grooms' grandmother, Mrs. Kenneth MacInnis was dressed in blue jersey with blue accessories. All pinned on white carnations tied with ribbons matching their ensembles.

For her honeymoon trip to Quebec and Massachusetts the bride changed into a three piece double knit suit in charcoal and beige with matching assessories, and accented with a corsage of yellow carnations.

Prior to her marriage the bride was tendered a community shower at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Heath MacLeod, Irishtown, when she received many beautiful gifts. She was the recipient of a hostess chair and footstool from the staff of the Royal Bank of Canada, Charlottetown, where she is employed. The couple also received lovely gifts at a post nuptial shower held in Hunter River Hall.

The newly weds are residing at Hunter River.

MARY HAWORTH

Happily Married Woman Is Attracted To Other Man

Dear Mary Haworth: Is it normal for a happily married woman to be drawn to another man?

My husband is one of those wonderfully strong good sound persons who knows where he is going and how to proceed. In 10 years' marriage (with my help in the early years) he has advanced from laborer- type work to a highly placed management job.

Now we are quite well off with a fine house, children and modest luxuries. We are still very much in love. Yet with all this I have found myself in the last three years becoming more and more infatuated with a professional man; he also is happily married.

In the first year, he seemed mutually drawn to me. More than once (though not lately) he offered me a lift home from his office. I was glad to be able to refuse (as I also was driving). Once his assistant was excused early and we were alone in consultation for more than an hour. He didn't make a pass; but looking back, I suppose he was waiting for a sign from me.

I think of him constantly and have an urge to pursue him; yet feel I can't do this terrible thing. There are too many lives at stake, to throw them all aside for a short selfish fling. Even so, if I felt I could get away with it, I probably would go ahead.

My husband has been the best of men to the children and me. He is an introvert and I love a gay way of life; but we are entirely compatible since I have adapted to his pace. Perhaps because of this I long for a love affair, but I don't think so.

I have thrown myself energetically into housework, club work, cooking sprees, redecorating, etc., but my mind is always on him. Please tell me how to overcome this desire for him. Seemingly I can't do it alone.— B.L.

Dear B.L.: It is normal (I.e., within the range of natural reflex) for a happily married person to feel strongly attracted (physically or mentally) to an outsider.

However, as persons aren't beasts— but instead are endowed with rational faculties of foresight, understanding and will power, whereby to govern their attitudes— they would be less than fully human, in their behavior, if they were to translate such attractions into sexual flings.

Persons aren't simply higher caste animals, as certain theorists would have us believe. True we share with some of the animals a not - too - dissimilar physical structure. But there the kinship ends.

Human beings differ radically from the animal creatures, in possessing a light within, a spark of the divine, a faculty of potentially illimitable intelligence, awareness, self-consciousness and all-encompassing comprehension, that marks them as "made in the image and likeness of God."

As persons made in the image and likeness of God— Whose nature is love— It follows that mankind is made for love too. Hence people ought to love one another, with unselfish reverence, as a matter of course. As to why they don't — that's a very long story, having to do with primordial man's loss of Paradise and subsequent bumbling misuse of his faculties, in disordered pursuit of wholeness.

So much for preface. Now, about you. Very likely the professional man is your doctor; probably your obstetrician. Also he may be a bit of a flirt and you two may be genuinely attracted to each other as individuals, in some degree.

But in the main, you are bewitched by your unconscious image of him, in his crucially helpful specialist role. Therapeutically he boosts your self-esteem; causes you to feel important, cherished and protected; and you see him as Godlike, in his wisdom, understanding, solicitous insight and effective paternal-type care. Thus your hungry worshipful gratitude earries over, unconsciously, into reveries of being his sweetheart.

This is a fairly common phenomenon in the patient - obstetrician relationship. The cure consists in candidly liking, appreciating and respecting the doctor, realistically; while putting aside, as silly inappropriate school girl fantasy, your tendency to day dream of him as a possible love partner..—M.H.
