MARY HAWORTH

Similar Circumstances Creates Same Products

Dear Mary Haworth—It is with great interest that I regularly read your column, as I find much wisdom in your counselling.

Being a European, married for many years to an American, I would like to speak in defence of P. Y., the heartick wife who fought valiantly to keep a German girl from stealing her husband.

Anything she says against continental morals should be forgiven by us. I would have felt the same, in similar circumstances.

As Shakespeare said: "Hell hath no fury—" I find myself unable to finish the quotation, my school days being far off, and having been quite unworthy of my English teacher.

But may I say, perhaps the attraction that European women have for American men (moral standards quite aside) rests in the different educational systems. American girls are taught to compete with men, while in my native continent girls are taught to please them.

Human nature hasn't changed much. I have only to listen to my 21-year-old son to ponder on this. Is it very surprising that some American men prefer the girl who is taught to please? He may even need her to be that way so that he can mature. D.N.

Dear D. N.—According to Bartlett's Familiar Quotations, it was William Congreve (1670-1729) who coined the phrase: "Hell has no rage like love to hatred turned, nor hell a fury like a woman scorned."

As for your notion that the American educational system teaches girls to compete with men, I can see that an outlooker from the Old World might get that impression. But a born insider, a dyed in the wool American knows different.

The thorough-going distinction between the American versus the European brand of femininity is, chiefly, that American girls aren't trained to feel that pleasing men is the be-all and end-all of feminine achievement. Rather, they take for granted that men and women are equals in the overall plan of life, in the sense that they are so constituted as to be indispensable to each other's welfare and happiness.

Unless and until a series of wars in quick succession so reduces our male population that our women feel desperately threatened by a shortage of mates, it is likely that American girls will continue to treat men as friends and equals in this spirit—rather than as gods whose moods and temperaments are to be studied and propitiated.

You've put your finger on a fact of life, in suggesting that some men especially need the willing handmaiden type of sweetheart or wife, in order to mature. And what is this, but a sign and symptom of that particular man's immaturity for his age?

The Guest Of Honour Samples Birthday Cake

By IDA BAILEY ALLEN

Taste testers are born, not made. A yen for gourmet foods can start even in baby years.

Tow-headed, fair-complexioned, blue-eyed Tony Rivenbark of California is living proof of this.

Last June 17 was the day Tony reached the great age of two years. To celebrate the event, a party was held in the Rivenbark rumpus room. Eight little guests were invited.

It was a gay occasion, with festoons of multicolored balloons, a pin-the-tail-on-the-donkey game, paper roll-out whistles and, of course, a big birthday cake!

But Tony couldn't wait—what gourmet can?

While his guests romped about, Tony made a dash to the party table and, with one stubby finger, sampled and approved the icing on the cake. Then, to be quite sure, he climbed up in his high chair to get a better sample with a spoon. Most of it landed on his happy face.

Daddy snapped the picture that proved Tony Rivenbark is a born taste-tester!

Tony's birthday cake: Make 1 (10 in.) angel cake from a 1 lb. 1 oz. lemon custard angel cake mix, according to pkg. directions. Invert and cool.

Blend 1-3 c. butter, 1-3 tsp. salt and 1 c. sifted confectioners' sugar. Beat until light and frothy.

Add ¼ c. undiluted evaporated milk alternately with 2 c. sifted confectionery sugar. Stir in 1 tsp. vanilla and a few drops green vegetable food coloring. Mix thoroughly.

Spread over the top and sides of cake. Then drift over thin colored candies in pastel shades. Top with the required number of candies in suitable holders.

Tomorrow's dinner: Chilled vegetable juice, chopped beef potato pie, September garden salad, sliced peaches and pears, peanut cookies, coffee, tea, milk. Measurements are level; recipes for 4 to 6.

Chopped beef potato pie: Brown 1 lb. good quality chopped beef in a 2 tsp. fat in heavy frying pan, breaking up meat with fork.

Add 2 sliced, peeled medium onions, 1 tsp. celery seed, 3 thin-sliced peeled carrots, 2 tsp. enriched flour, 1 tsp. salt, ½ tsp. pepper and 2 c. water. Stir in 2 tsp. beef broth powder.

When boiling rapidly, transfer to 7 x 11-in. buttered shallow casserole. Cover with hot fluffy whipped mashed potato. Dot with butter.

Bake in hot oven, 400 degrees F. about 20 min., or until well-browned.

TRICK OF THE CHEF

Add a generous dusting of grated sharp cheese to chopped beef potato pie before baking.

TODAY'S GOOD SAMARITAN EFFECTIVELY MODERNIZED

"But a certain Samaritan, came where he was and bound up his wounds... and took care of him."

Thus, in the parable of the good Samaritan, our Lord set an example of our duty to our fellow-men.

The Protestant Family Service Bureau is made up of a group of citizens who are emulating the spirit of the good Samaritan. It is the agency through which the individual may find help in times of need and through which, we as contributors may be good Samaritans. The Bureau's aims are four-fold:

1. To educate families about good child care and efficient home management and to train them in how to solve day to day problems that confront the average family.
2. To help people become as fully self-supporting as possible and to become productive members of society.
3. To help people who are faced with problems, to overcome their worries and anxieties and obtain as much satisfaction as possible from life.
4. To strength and develop family life so that children may be well equipped to enjoy life and make an adequate contribution to society.

It must be emphasized that the provision of direct relief (food, clothing, fuel, medicine, etc.) is not a basic aim of the Bureau—it is merely a means of obtaining the above objective—but first material needs must be satisfied, for:

"The thing that numbs the heart is this: That men cannot devise Some scheme of life to vanish fear That lurks in some men's eyes. Fear of the lack of shelter, food, And fire for winter's cold. Fear of their children's lacking these— This in a world so old."

"Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these... ye did it unto Me."

 NOTEBOOK
 WANTED... A LADY REFEREE!

I had a big argument with my wife last night... and I used the help of some of my lady customers to win my wife in the end.

My wife had been doing some of her Spring cleaning around the house and I wanted to bring out slip covers in to clean them at the same time as the drapes.

She was quite happy to have her drapes cleaned. In fact she wanted them cleaned as quickly as possible. So why not the slip covers so that the whole living room would be clean at the same time. She said no... just the drapes. I said that in another month, the sun would be too hot. She would need her drapes in the afternoon to keep the house cool. You can't win. This morning, our drapes are going through and a month from now it will be the slip covers. What do you think?

Whether you agree with my wife or with me... when drapes and slip covers should be cleaned, at least my wife and I agree on one thing. Drapes and Slip Covers should be cleaned at least once a year and preferably twice.

And when you want to freshen up a room have drapes and slip covers cleaned. It's true that many of them can be washed. But it's a big job for you and hard on your home laundry unit. Why not bring or send your drapes and slip covers to STERNS LIMITED. You'll be pleased with the appearance and the price is not high.
