

Aristocratic Printers.

The Fifth Avenue contains two boys who are very different from rich men's sons generally. Their ages eleven and fourteen, and they are both studious and industrious, finding even their amusement in a useful pursuit. These lads are the sons of Cornelius Vanderbilt, and are named one after his father and the other after himself. They are amateur printers, and a room in their father's Fifth Avenue palace is devoted to this purpose. They have a press, cases of type and other material used in the craft, and issue a neat little paper called the Comet. This is both an amusement and an education, and William H. (senior) reads it with deep interest. He has indeed good reason to be highly pleased with his grandsons. They recently offered an excellent pocket-knife for the best tale of not over five hundred words, and the prize was won by George Marion, who himself is under sixteen. The Comet being the first paper ever published in the Fifth Avenue, has before it an important destiny. What a pity it was not represented in that array of literati which was so recently displaced at Madison Square Theatre.

Running Down a Man-Eating Tiger.

A railway survey is being carried on through the North Cachar Hills in Assam, and among other difficulties it encounters is the number of man-eating tigers which infest the district. A few weeks ago Mr. Loder, the assistant engineer, was setting out through the jungle to work in the early morning with a party of nine men, when a tiger suddenly sprang forward, seized one of the Goorkhas by the throat, and was off in an instant. Mr. Loder armed only with a hatchet, at once gave chase, three of his men joined him, and following along the trail, plainly marked by blood and bites of the man's clothes they ran the beast so close that after a mile and a half he was compelled to drop his victim. What was left of the dead body was tied to a bamboo, and the little party pushed back with their burden. Every English sportsman shoots tigers now-a-days; but there are probably few, who, like Mr. Loder, have run a man-eating tiger down and robbed him of his prey.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A California Farm.

A "LITTLE PIECE" OF LAND AND WHAT IS KEPT AND RAISED ON IT.

California boasts of a farm of 16,000 acres, stocked with 1300 cows, 50 bulls, 50 horses and mules, 700 hogs, 500 hens and turkeys, 300 pigeons, having 160 acres of apple trees, 30 acres of Bartlett pear trees, 15 acres of peaches, 10 acres of apricots, 15 acres of nectarines, besides many acres of plums, currants, walnut trees, fig trees, etc. One field of barley covers 700 acres, and 100 acres each are devoted to wheat and corn, 4 acres to beets, 1000 acres to grass and 75 acres to vineyards. From 5,000, to 20,000 pounds of butter are made per week, the amount varying according to the season. Last year 75,000 bushels of apples were gathered and so on with the other productions. Ninety men are employed throughout the year with 200 additional hands for several weeks in the gathering season. The farm is known as the Blanche Novato, is owned by Hon. F. C. DeLong, is valued at $600,000 and is situated about eight miles distant from San Rafael.

A School for Thieves.

A strange case has just been developed in London, Eng., recalling Dickens' description of Fagin's school for thieves. Bertha Dennis, a young woman twenty-two years old, after a mysterious disappearance of two months, returns home with an extraordinary story that she was dragged by a woman in a railroad train, taken by a garret in a miserable house, where she knows not. The woman deprived her of her clothing, and detained her a prisoner there for ten weeks, and then led her away blindfolded and allowed her to escape. She walked home in a destitute condition, looking ten years older than when she disappeared. The statement seems almost incredible, but she says the house where she was in headquarters for female thieves, who go out disguised by wigs and paint, to depredate. Her clothes were used by the thieves in some of their expeditions. The police are greatly puzzled and mystified, not knowing whether to regard Miss Dennis as a victim of a curious delusion or as the subject of real experience.

Beecher on Evolution.

Henry Ward Beecher began a series of sermons on "Evolution" in New York on the 26th ult. Beecher said he saw no bridge between the human race and the animal kingdom in their origin. Man had gradually grown up from barbaric conditions. He appeared on the earth ages before the time given in Christian history. The first people to gain any knowledge of God was Hebrew race. God gave no instructions to man originally, but left him to find out everything for himself. His only revelation was after man had gained some idea of the moral quality.
