CHAPTER LXV.

One morning he saw about a million birds very busy in the bay, and it proved to be a spermaceti whale came ashore.

He went out to her directly with all his tools, for he wanted oil for his enterprise, and the sea oil was exhausted.

When he got near the whale in his boat, he observed a harpoon sticking in the animal's back. He cut steps with his axe in the slippery carcass, and got up to it as well as he could, extracted it by cutting and pulling, and threw it down into his boat, but not until he had taken the precaution to stick a great piece of blubber on the barbed point. He then sawed and hacked under difficulties, being buffeted and bothered with thousands of birds, so eager for slices that it was as much as he could do to avoid the making of minced fowl; but, true to his gentle creed, he contrived to get three hundred-weight of blubber without downright killing any of these greedy competitors, though he buffeted some of them, and nearly knocked out what little sense they had. He came ashore with his blubber and harpoon, and when he came to examine the latter he found that the name of the owner was cut deep in the steel—Josh. Fullalove, J. Fernandez. This inscription had a great effect on Robert Penfold's mind. It seemed to bring the Island of Juan Fernandez, and humanity in general, nearer to him.

He boiled down the blubber, and put
