

THE CITY SCHOOLS

Midsummer Examinations. UPPER PRINCE STREET SCHOOL.

This popular school was to-day publicly examined by His Worship the Mayor, Mr. T. C. James, Archibald Kennedy, Esq., Miss Finlayson, Mr. J. K. Ross and others. The results in the various rooms were, we are informed, very satisfactory indeed.

- Arithmetic—Ella Cummings, prize by Mrs Philip Bridges. Good Conduct—Abbie Wellner, prize by Mrs William Toombs. Diligence—Millie Bevan, prize by Mrs George Bremner. Neatness—Nellie Horne, prize by Mr Fulton.

The crush of visitors was great, and after the picturesque drill on the ample school grounds, there was a rush for the upper hall in which the entertainment was to be given. With much persevering but good natured climbing upstairs and pushing and forcing, a large proportion of the spectators obtained seats.

The Mayor publicly thanked the principal and teachers of the school for the high honor they had conferred upon him in unanimously electing him its Patron. He testified to the thoroughness of the history teaching imparted in the principal's department and to the general excellence of the school.

Dr. Anderson referred to the success of the pupils of Upper Prince Street School at examinations in Prince of Wales College and Normal School.

Ewen Stewart, Esq., Secretary of the City School Board, and Grading Officer, said that the results of the grading examinations would be announced on the re-opening of the schools, and corrected the idea that the general excellence of which he spoke was confined to West Kent Street School.

The prize list of the Principal's department is unavoidably crowded out.

The Philharmonic Concert. THE good taste of the audience will, we think, bear out the opinion of THE EXAMINER that the programme of last evening was more harmoniously balanced, that the enunciation was very much better, and that there was a more sympathetic interpretation of the spirit of the music, than in any of the concerts previously given by the Philharmonic Society.

Mr. Heartz afforded, throughout, an almost perfect accompaniment, and effective assistance was rendered by Miss Macdonald with the violin, Mr. Fletcher with the cornet, and Mr. Sharp with the bass viol.

The great want of the Society at present is want of volume, though this was not so much felt as if the hall were larger. The solos, duets and trios in the Golden Legend were delightful as rendered by Mrs. McLeod, Mr. Lloyd and Professor Caven. From Elijah to Lucifer is a long leap, but Professor Caven took it successfully, and all three were last evening fully equal to their high reputations and their parts.

It was pleasing to hear again the sweet voices of Misses Moore and Blake, each of which is worth the most careful cultivation. Mr. Charles Hermans, too, is one of the most promising of our vocalists. We greatly regret that our space to-day will not admit of such a critique as the concert of last evening deserves.

We can only add that we heartily congratulate the Society and Mr. Lloyd upon the great improvement which has been made manifest.

Athletic Sports and Trotting Races at Georgetown. Thursday, the 7th July, inst., promises to be a great day in Georgetown. The committee in charge of the trotting races have had the track put in first class condition, and nearly every evening some of the local horsemen are out with their flyers and fitting them for the contest.

The King's County Exhibition Association was enrolled on the 15th of June, 1892, as a member of the National Trotting Association, and this will be a guarantee that all the races will be fairly contested.

The committee are fitting up the grounds of the Association in good style. The judges stand has been newly painted, the track fence has been whitewashed and an outside fence is being built around the dump from the grandstand to the east of the drill shed.

Arrangements have been made for an interesting series of athletic sports, and it is rumored that in addition a grand tug of war will take place between ten sailors from one of the Canadian cutters and ten natives. This contest will likely prove most interesting.

The entries for the trotting races close on June 30th, when five per cent of pure must be forwarded with written entry to the secretary of the King's County Exhibition Association. As a member of the National Trotting Association, every entry and proceeding must be according to the rules.

Horsemen intending to compete, should make a note of the above. Arrangements have been made with the P. E. Island Railway to issue return tickets from Charlottetown to Georgetown on July 7th by special train leaving Charlottetown at 8 o'clock, a. m. (leaving at 90 cents, and from Souris to Georgetown by regular morning train at rate of $1. Tickets from intermediate stations will also be issued at equally low rates.

Philharmonic Concert. DEAR SIR,—After the unjust tirade against the Philharmonic Society which appeared in one of the city newspapers a short time ago on the occasion of the rendition of Mendelssohn's Elijah, I feel thoroughly pleased that the members had independence and spirit enough to immediately prepare for another concert and if need be for another tirade, and that three years of vigorous growth had given the institution such permanent vitality that it must exist and continue to develop under any circumstances or conditions that may arise.

The strength and beauty are true qualities in the life of nature and of art that are so eminently admirable, and these qualities seem to be pre-eminently possessed by the Philharmonic Society.

The persistency with which its members have clung to what is highest and best, although most difficult in musical art, for the material of their concert is in spite of censure from a section of the city press that continually harped on the necessity for simpler music, is evidence that they have a keen appreciation for what ever is beautiful in music, and the continued life of the society in presence of many adverse conditions and criticizing enemies is an evidence of its strength.

I was very anxious to enjoy the pleasure of hearing the concert last night, but unfortunately was called away from the city on business at mid-day. However as I valued the educational privilege of listening to the music which the Philharmonic Society intended to produce I hurried away from Charlottetown through such a storm of dust as might make an inhabitant of the Desert of Sahara ashamed of his country, and thanks to my sturdy little horse after a drive of forty miles managed to return to the city in time to hear the latter portion of the "Golden Legend" which to me was a richly musical treat.

THE TUNNEL BORINGS. Progress of the Work.

(Special correspondence of The Examiner.)

JOURNAIN ISLAND, June 25th.

The borings have been completed for the approach to the tunnel on the New Brunswick side. The depth of beds penetrated is one hundred and sixty feet, and it is agreed by all engaged in the work that they are of a character most favorable for tunneling. The carboniferous base rock has been reached and penetrated at two distinct points; and it is clearly shown that the soft red shales and sandstones (of the lower portion of P. E. Island run across the Strait and repose with a gentle incline on the northern border of the New Brunswick system.

The red rocks of the Island just touch the mainland here, extending inland from half a mile to a mile. They skirt the shore of the Tormentine Peninsula for fifteen miles from here to Upper Cape, presenting prominent red cliffs to the roll of the Straits waves. While in the rear of the front line of farms, the grey sandstone hills rise bold and rock-strewn.

A point of serious investigation has been to determine whether the Tormentine anticlinal runs right across to Cape Traverse, or turns to the eastward in the direction of the Hillsborough Bay. The latter now appears to be its true direction, so that the tunnel beds lie in an undisturbed position in a broad syncline, whose eastern extension underlies the rich green swells of southern P. E. Island.

Next week the drill will start out on the water. Hitherto the weather has been so windy that submarine drilling would have been an impossibility, but much calmer weather is prevailing just now, and it is hoped that with a large barge for the shal lows, and a stout, well-provided schooner for the mid strait, that the work will progress successfully. The schooner has gone to take in coal for ballast, as also to supply the engine with fuel, but the barge is on the spot. The engineers talk of erecting an iron stage one hundred feet in height, to be sunk in mid-strait to place the drill upon, so as to do away with the oscillation that must necessarily attend an attempt to work it from the deck of a vessel. But this whole matter of submarine drilling is so new and untried, that the public need not wonder that haste is being made alowly. The cores which have already been taken up are very satisfactory, and Mr. Kelly, the Diamond drill man, deserves great credit for his work.

The Functions of Universities. NOTHING there is so doubt that the education and training of our youth is the great question of the day. The great universities of this and the other continent are striving earnestly under the pressure of public opinion to make their systems of education more and more practical.

Prof. Allison, president of Mc. Alison University, spoke to a large meeting last night in the interests of his institution. He undertook to define the functions of universities. He said it is not the duty of universities to convey learning which may be termed practical. It is their duty to convey knowledge and training which will form the basis of a practical and technical education. It is their duty to make men gentlemen. He quoted from James Russell Lowell, but Mr. Lowell's words do not warrant this definition. Now, this notion that it is the duty of universities to merely train men's minds, to manufacture gentlemen, to convey knowledge merely preparatory to something else, is of such an ancient character that I had hoped no man having credit of a great act of learning would entertain it.

The great aim of every act of learning should be distinctly and directly practical. Every teacher should be continually asking himself "What practical result can arise from my present efforts?" Mr. Allison is behind the age. If the spirit which animated Mr. Allison last night should continue to animate his superstitiousity of his university, then I do not hesitate to say that his university is unworthy of public support. Our people, before they give their money, should demand and obtain an assurance of a complete change of educational policy.
