How Men Carry Money.

"Western men says that men have various ways of carrying money. Bakers, grocers and bankers carry it in a big crumpled wad. Bankers carry it in nice clean bills, laid out full length in a morocco pocket-book. No banker ever folds a bill. Brokers always fold their bills twice. The young business man carries his money in his vest pocket, while the sporting man carries it in his trousers pocket. Farmers and drovers carry their money in their inside vest pocket, and whenever you see a man carry a lot of loose change in his overcoat pocket, you may know that he has at some been a car conductor or a curb-stone merchant. Newspaper men carry their money in some good bank; and poets?—well, poets don't trouble themselves about such a trivial thing as money.

One of the principal features of the present London season is dancing. The latter is being conducted on an entirely new plan, of a distinctly oriental character. Instead of the man taking any active part in the dancing, as heretofore, they merely looked on, seated in comfortable easy chairs, while the dancing is done for them, not by Indian Nautch girls or Egyptian stiches, but by peresses of the realm and ladies of birth belonging to the very smartest sets of London society. No great indeed, is the craze for skirt and ballet dancing that by next year no family with any pretensions to social rank and station will be complete without its "dancing girls." Even little girls under 12 years of age are being taught the art, and the professional dancing masters and mistresses, instead of making their young pupils acquainted with the waltz, the quadrille, the reel and the lancers, as hitherto, impart to them the art of the ballet.
