LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Red Point Breakwater.

SIR,—I see by late papers that the Estimates for the year have been brought down in the House of Commons, and that nothing appears in them for our proposed Breakwater at Red Point. It seems that our representatives at Ottawa have forgotten us altogether. They have been advocating the claims of other sections of the County, but it never once occurred to them that the Red Point Breakwater project should take precedence over all other projects of the kind in this part of the Island. They told the House about Naufrage Harbor improvements; and in the last Patriot I observe a speech from Dr. McIntyre in favor of the Bay Fortune Breakwater. But the Red Point Breakwater gets the go by. He promised, at public meetings and in private, before the last election, to support our claims for harbor improvements. He has not done so, and will no doubt ask to be excused. But we cannot excuse him. He and everyone else acquainted with the locality know that a Breakwater at Red Point would give shipping facilities of the greatest advantage to the farmers of Elmira, East Point, West River, Red Point, Baltic, Little Harbor, as well as to other settlements lying east and north of the point where the work is proposed to be built. The roads between East Point and the nearest shipping place, Souris, are among the hilliest on the Island, and no wonder the farmers who have to haul their produce over them in the fall complain bitterly over the disadvantages and hardships with which they have to contend. A Breakwater at Red Point is what is wanted. A harbor here would prove of more advantage to them than even the proposed East Point Railway. Dr. McIntyre is aware of this, and still he pleads for Bay Fortune and Naufrage, while he hasn't a word to say in behalf of our Red Point Breakwater. We expected better, both from himself and his colleague, when they were around here canvassing.

Yours,
R.
Red Point, May 21, 1888.

Another Cryptogram.

A GENTLEMAN WHO BELIEVES THAT CROMWELL WROTE "PARADISE LOST."

Mr. Labouchere cables to the New York World as follows: "The air is full of cryptograms and Donnelly discoveries just now. Having devoted some attention to the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy—for which, I am proud to say, I have received an autograph acknowledgment from Mr. Donnelly—I have been favored with a great many communications from rival discoverers. I think the best of these is a communication from a gentleman who has found out that "Paradise Lost" was really written by Oliver Cromwell. The case for Oliver Cromwell is, to my mind, irresistibly strong. John Milton, as every schoolboy knows, was the Protector's secretary. Cromwell occupied his leisure moments in dictating to him the great Christian epic. It would have been fatal to Cromwell politically, especially with his army, to have been known as a poet. The thing was therefore kept secret. My informant supposes that on his deathbed Oliver Cromwell charged Milton to burn the manuscript. The temptation, however, was too much for the honest Puritan, and he brought out the work in his own name. I have not space to go into the evidence. But there are one or two points which will strike every reader. Milton certainly wrote light verses as a young man, but nothing which indicates the seriousness of the purpose of the author of "Paradise Lost." Further light is thrown on his character by the well known fact that he was the last undergraduate subjected to corporal punishment at either university. Finally the prior evidence is clinched by a cryptogram like that of Donnelly. My correspondent wisely refrains from telling all he knows on this point. But it will set people thinking, I fancy, to hear that there are not a page of the "Paradise Lost" in which every letter that forms the name of Oliver Cromwell is not to be found.

A Famous FASTER.

Mrs. Weidler, the famous Lancaster, Pa., fasting woman, reached the fifty-second day of her fast on the 13th. Some of the local physicians think some one has smuggled food to her, but her door has been barred, the transom nailed up and the only window is barred and three stories above the ground. The only keys to her room are in the keeping of Dr. Senesiger, the resident physician, and Mr. Eaby, the ward-tender, who is an experienced and reputable woman. Mrs. Weidler entered the institution just one year ago, being sent there because she was starving herself at home. For a time after entering the hospital she would eat if she thought no one observed her. Finally she would not even do this, and for five months liquid food was forced through a stomach pump, the woman violently resisting, and it became necessary to handcuff the poor woman and hold her down in order to feed her. This process was stopped fifty-two days ago, and in all that time Mrs. Weidler has had no nourishment but water, drinking from half a pint to a pint daily. She was strong enough on the 13th to scrub the floor of her room and set things to rights.

The Archbishop of Canterbury's wife, Mrs. Benson, presided recently at a temperance convention of women at Maidstone. She said she had been a total abstainer for two years, and she urged others to discard intoxicants.

"I hear," says London Truth, "that Mr. Robert Browning has nearly completed the first portion of his 'Reminiscences,' which will include an interesting account of the early life of Mrs. Browning."

Hereford Polled Angus Cattle.

The Agriculturalist reports: "There arrived here by the boat on Friday evening last a valuable lot of Hereford and Polled Angus cattle, purchased for Hon John Yeo and Mr. John Richards from Messrs. Dawes & Co., Montreal, who are among the largest breeders and importers in Canada of these cattle. All arrived in good condition except one valuable Polled Angus bull, which was, we are sorry to learn, suffocated by the slipping of his halter. This valuable animal would not be worth less than two hundred dollars. It is needless to say that these animals are splendid specimens of their respective breeds, and the finest, we understand, that have ever been imported to this Province. They are all registered or eligible for registration in the English, American and Canadian Herd Books. This lot comprises two Hereford bulls rising three years, and three heifers, one four, and the other two rising three. The three heifers are in calf by bulls at the head of Messrs. Dawes' herd. There are three Polled Angus, one a yearling bull, and two heifers of the same age. All the perfect beauties. As milkers the Herefords are considered very fair, some of them being far above the average, but as beef cattle they stand second to none, with perhaps the exception of the Polled Angus, which it is said are "the breed that beat the record." In the large English and American markets their beef sells from two to three cents higher than any other. Both the Hereford and Polled Angus are very hardy, of kind disposition, easily kept, great grazers and foragers, and fatten readily on grass. They put on flesh in places where it is of most value. Either of the above makes an excellent cross with Short Horn, Ayrshire, or grade cattle of any kind."

The Voice of the Vatican.

The Chronicle's Rome correspondent says:—"The Papal rescript will be read from Irish pulpits at an early date, with an explanation from the bishops—which will be submitted to the Vatican for revision—to the effect that the Pope does not condemn the political objects of the Nationalist party, but only the means employed for attaining those objects." The Standard's Rome correspondent says:—"The Irish bishops have forwarded to the Propaganda their observations on the mode of putting the Papal rescript into effect so as to eliminate any political significance and to avoid bitterness. These and other points are now under consideration." A majority of the Parnellite members of Parliament have returned for Dublin to attend a conference on the Papal rescript, which will be held there on Thursday. Archbishop Walsh, in taking leave of the Pope, said that no Irish could rebel against the rescript, the question being one of faith and morality.

The Late Murder and Drink.

(Toronto Globe.)
It is beyond all reasonable question that the late shocking and deplorable murder by which Toronto has been disgraced was caused exclusively by intoxicating drink. However brutal and conscienceless Buckley may have been, yet had he not been maddened by drink he would never have acted as he did. And on the other hand, had his victim been sober, it is all but certain that she would have escaped from the fierce attack of the worthless ruffian with whom she was cohabiting. Drink, brought both down to the utter destitution and degradation in which they were, and fitly closed their most miserable careers in violence and murder. The whole of the sad and sickening tragedy is but another commentary on the character and another illustration of the legitimate effects of the drink traffic. It is for the community to say how long such a state of things is to continue.

Gold in the River Bed.

A belief that plenty of gold could be found on the bed of the lower Fraser river, induced an attempt several years ago to employ machinery to get at the precious metal. A powerful steam pump, operating through an iron cylinder, was used to draw sand and gravel up from the bottom of the river, the expectation being that gold would be found amongst the sand. The plan did not work, and after a good deal of money had been spent the attempt was abandoned. A new scheme on lines somewhat similar is at present being taken in hand by indefatigable gold-hunters, and the British Columbian regards the project with favor, claiming that gold must be plenty in the river bed, being washed down from the banks and places where the ore was formerly obtained in abundance.

Sir Charles' Arguments Used.

Mr. Allen, discussing the tariff bill in the House of representatives on the 16th inst., quoted extensively from Sir Charles Tupper's utterances in the Canadian Parliament, in which explaining his apparent concessions in the fishery negotiations he cited Secretary Bayard's letters to himself, saying that it was the only way he could obtain his object of closer commercial relations. The ink was hardly dry upon the treaty before the chairman of the committee on ways and means, representing the administration, brought forward a measure to make free every article that Canada sent into the United States and upon which $1,800,000 in duties were collected last year. The discussion was continued.
