BAKED OMELETTE

A wonderful dish! The omelette mixture rose to the tops of the layers and developed a lightly browned crust over the surface and held up well, even when cut for serving.

Yield—4 to 6 servings. 6 eggs, separated. 1/2 teaspoon salt. 3 tablespoons flour. 1/2 teaspoon pepper. 2 tablespoons chopped parsley. 2 tablespoons finely-chopped onion.

Beat the egg whites, to which the salt has been added, until stiff but not dry. Beat egg yolks until thick, then blend in the flour and pepper; add parsley and finely-chopped onion. Add yolk mixture to beaten whites, and fold just enough to combine.

Mixture into two well-greased and heated eight-inch round layer-cake pans and spread out, making the edges a little deeper than the centre. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, until a silver knife, inserted into the centre of one of the layers, comes out clean—about 25 minutes.

Princess Margaret Missing West End Night Life

By Reuters News Agency LONDON—Princess Margaret has suddenly forsaken the bright night life of London's West End.

The 20-year-old Princess was frequently photographed and headlined last year on her visits to night clubs and restaurants. But she has not been seen in one since before Christmas.

The London evening newspaper Star reported last night that the King is said to prefer that his second daughter should attend only private evening parties.

Buckingham Palace officials would not comment on the changed social calendar of the Princess. Some members of the court circle were perturbed last year about the kind of publicity Princess Margaret was getting through her enthusiasm for night life.

They were particularly annoyed by one report that she danced the can-can at an American Embassy party.

SEVERAL USES FOR MINERAL OIL

It is interesting to watch the phases through which medicines, drugs, and foods pass as the years go by. Not long ago calories were considered most important, then came minerals and finally vitamins.

In addition to acting as a lubricant, paraffin oil has been found to help in actual inflammation of the bladder where there are gallstones with colic and other symptoms.

However, there is a fly in the ointment in the use of mineral oil; research workers have found that mineral oil removes some of the vitamins from the body, especially vitamin A, and are advising against its use for this reason.

While it is true that some vitamins are removed from the blood and in some cases may cause roughness or other skin conditions, there is no reason why the individual cannot eat enough foods rich in vitamin A daily and so get all the vitamin A necessary and the advantages of mineral oil, too.

Foods rich in vitamin A are cod liver oil, butter, cream, milk, cheese, egg yolk, liver, leafy green vegetables, yellow vegetables, tomatoes.

All The Details

"Have you ever appeared as a witness in a suit before?" counsel asked the girl in the witness-box.

"Why, of course," she replied. "Will you tell the jury what suit it was?"

The information came promptly: "It was a blue suit, with white collar and cuffs, and buttons all the way down the front."

Salt Shakers

It is much more satisfactory to have individual salt shakers on the dinner table, rather than place them at intervals. You will not have the constant interruptions of requests for the salt during the meal.

Saucepans

The saucepans will last longer if dried after having been washed. If you wish you can dry them over the fire or wipe out with a clean dry cloth, but be sure to dry them.

Rusty Springs

If the wire and iron bed springs have become rusty, apply a coat of aluminum paint.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

By this, February's days will have been spent, and March will have come in. March, month of variable moods, and often wild and reckless. Yet also gay and repentant, and on the whole feared a bit, but admired and mostly beloved.

And now we may plan for our garden, our plantings. "You care more for the garden than you do for your husband," Aunt Mary Maria, one of Spring in "Anne of Ingleside" says. "My garden is so kind to me" answered Anne dreamily.

As a general thing, these warring parents are not deliberately trying to discredit each other with their children. They are merely giving vent to their own tempers and revenging their own grievances.

Junior and Mary are not the senseless little dummies, seeing nothing and hearing nothing, that they appear to be as they eat their cereal and orange juice while Mother and Father bawl each other out over the breakfast table.

Very swiftly this week of ours has slipped away, so busy it has been. And so Spring-like, we have a suspicion that James and Mr. C. from the house on the hill have been expecting the Winter fields to green!

What these children whom the wise Judge appointed to referee their parents' fights said to them, I do not know, but I can imagine them saying: "Gee, Mom and Pop, have a heart. You brought us into the world without our asking for it and it is up to you to give us a fair chance to grow up into healthy, decent men and women, and we can't do that if we have to live in an atmosphere of hate that poisons us, and have our nerves wrecked by being in a perpetual row. How can we believe in truth and loyalty and high ideals and fine principles when we hear our father and mother accuse each other every day of everything that is low and contemptible?"

"Be a sport, Mom. Maybe Dad isn't the Fairy Prince you thought you were marrying, but he is a pretty good scout after all, and he works mighty hard to keep us all so comfortable. Forget the things you don't like about him. Quit nagging him about all of his little ways. Don't always be bringing up all the subjects you know are like a red flag to a bull. We can't remember a single quarrel that you and Dad have had, Mom, that you couldn't have sidestepped if you had just gone out of the way to dodge trouble instead of running out to meet it."

"Why don't you use a little of the salesmanship on Mom, Dad, that you do on your customers? Why don't you use the salespreeder a little instead of the hammer so much? Mom would just purr under your hand if you would stroke her for the right way."

"There isn't any sense in you and Mom quarrelling the way you do. So we, your children, forbid you to do it, and sentence you to be as polite to each other as you would be to strangers."

RAPID DELIVERY—These quadruplets were delivered at the rate of one per minute to 28-year-old Mrs. Harriet Pappas, of Baltimore, Md. Edward Pappas, 28, did his last name proud in becoming father of the two boys held by nurse Laverne Resch, and the two girls held by nurse Mary Hillgren.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Family Fights Children Unwilling Victims Of Parents' Quarreling

THE JUDGE of a Domestic Relations Court once appointed the children of a quarrelling husband and wife as arbiters of their parents' disputes and to keep the peace between them. This was a ruling worthy of Solomon himself in its wisdom, for if anything on earth could shock a crazily angry man and woman, engaged in hurling insults at each other, into sanity and a realization of the crime they were committing it would be to see themselves as they look to their children and to have their children's cold impartial verdict on their conduct.

Strange enough the children's point of view never seems to occur to the belligerent couples who fight out every difference of opinion to the last bitter round before the horrified eyes of their offspring. They think they have a right to pull off their fights on their own heartstones and that it doesn't matter that Junior and Mary have to listen to father call mother vile names and mother retaliate by accusing father of half the crimes in the calendar.

As a general thing, these warring parents are not deliberately trying to discredit each other with their children. They are merely giving vent to their own tempers and revenging their own grievances.

Junior and Mary are not the senseless little dummies, seeing nothing and hearing nothing, that they appear to be as they eat their cereal and orange juice while Mother and Father bawl each other out over the breakfast table.
