SIGNS OF THE TIMES.—Last night twenty five mechanics in the employ of Messrs. James Harris & Co., Paradise Row, were informed that their services would not be required for a few weeks.—St. John Globe.

HERE is a species of "signs of the times" that the Globe seldom takes notice of: OTTAWA, Oct. 31.—E. B. Eddy, of Hull, has created a new planing and box factory, which will give steady employment to 150 additional hands.—Moncton Times.

IN this respect the Charlottetown Patriot is an exact counterpart of the St. John Globe. Ever weeping and wailing over the tremendous exodus from the Island, on account of the evil effects of the iniquitous National Policy, the whole of Europe, Asia and Africa, not to omit the United States, might emigrate hitherward without a possibility of the Patriot editor ever realizing the fact. On these points the Globe writes:

The Domestic Loan.

Advices from Ottawa state that the result of the effort to meet the wishes of Canadian investors is that the total amount tendered for, was $1,177,000, of which $977,000 was accepted, being at or above par, and the balance of $200,000 was unaccepted. The Government recognizing that recent perturbations in the stock market have led against the loan, have decided to leave the balance of over three millions of dollars open for investors at 2 1/2 per cent. premium, thus giving those who, from time to time have obligation placed upon them to make the safest kind of investment possible, the chance to do so. It is abundantly evident that inducements have been held out to intending purchasers to abstain for the present from tendering from this domestic loan. This has been done by the parties offering an increase of the rate of interest of the investments that were likely to be transferred to the Dominion loan. It is well known that many applications for large sums have not been forwarded to the Finance Department, including the $500,000 mentioned by the Globe's Ottawa correspondent. The Finance Minister realized that an unusual conversion of floating into fixed capital has for some time been going on in Canada; and also that it will be convenient for corporations which have to make deposits with the Government to supply themselves with securities payable in Canada as necessity arises. Under these circumstances he has great reason for gratification that the whole amount of the proposed loan was not taken up and that a large portion is left to be gradually absorbed at a premium of 2 1/2 per cent, as future necessities of investors may require. Movements of an important nature, subsequent to the issuance of the prospectus, have rendered it unnecessary for the Government to obtain the balance of this four million loan at present, as all the requirements of December next, will be fully met without that balance. It may be added that for the amount obtained the minimum was par, and that no brokerage or commission has been paid.

Irving's First Appearance.

IMPRESSIONS OF MINGLED ADMIRATION AND DISAPPOINTMENT.

Mr. Henry Irving's opening at the Star Theatre was a most brilliant social and dramatic event. All the cognoscenti were present, and the New York Central railroad beamed out of one box at the Metropolitan Opera House in another. William H. Vanderbilt, Chauncey Depew, ex-Lieut.-Gov. Dorsheimer, and a score of other politico-railway magnates and Lotos Club orators were vis-a-vis with Christine Nilsson, Miss Terry, the Chevalier Copeland and Henry E. Abbey. At 8.20 there burst in upon the stage picture from the door in the flat a quaint figure in corduroy trousers, cloak and slouched hat. He struck an attitude, and was received with a hurricane of applause. It was Henry Irving. He stood at least four minutes, while his audience, with a keen sense of what was due to international comity, belowered itself hoarse. Finally, with an impatient gesture of his arm, he dashed into the play and the applause ceased. The general impression created by his acting was of mingled admiration and disappointment. The admiration was given to the superb action of the somewhat weird and supernatural piece, which was managed with the precision of clockwork. The disappointment was at the delivery, the facial expression and the generally studied and exaggerated character of the actor himself. Anything more artificial and formal than Mr. Irving's use of tones and words has not been heard on our stage for many years. He is despoiled of what are usually called "physical advantages." That is to say, he is neither handsome nor graceful. His face is hard and expressionless, and not made up. His body is tall, gaunt and without any rhythmic action of a well made man. His gestures are studied, and lack the suppleness of natural organic harmony, and his voice is not only without range, but without vibration, and continuously breaks from a placid baritone to a squeaking falsetto. "The Bell" is a melodramatic comedy, with a dash of the supernatural in it. It depends for its general effect upon the sound of sleigh bells, heard only by the guilty hero of the play. His moving motive is a guilty conscience, working upon a murderer while he is surrounded by his family and friends. The whole process of dramatic development is subjective. Circumstance gives way to feeling. It is not what happens but what is suffered mystically, that makes the story, and the actor who plays the part of Mathias is required to show the successive phases of a supernatural horror, caused by the sounds of the bells, that grows upon him. Fear, remorse, self-pity, terror, despair and delirium have to be pictured by such means as are at the artist's command.—New York World.
