JAS. PATON & CO'Y.

THE BURNS CONCERT.

The audience which attended the Burns anniversary celebration last evening completely filled the Opera House, and thoroughly enjoyed the excellent programme prepared by Mr. James Paton and the gentleman associated with him on the concert committee.

Professor Caven, whose fine bass voice has not been heard for a long time, contributed the first vocal number, "A Hundred Pipers," which pleased the audience and made them anxious for more.

The second part of the programme was opened by the ever-popular Robert Lamont, who sang "Come under my Plaid," as only he can sing it; and in response to a vociferous encore Mr. Lamont gave "The Highlander's Toast."

There were two quartettes on the programme, and both were pleasing combinations, the voices blending well. The first was "Robin Adair," rendered by Messrs. Davison, Cook, Maloney and McKay, and the second, "Annie Laurie," by Mrs. Nerton, Mrs. Watts, Miss Brown and Miss Webster.

Miss Flo. Mackenzie gave two patriotic recitations, "Scotland, the Worlds Mother," and "Our Bit of the Thin Red Line," and the applause which attended the rendering indicated the great pleasure afforded the audience.

The Highland march and dance by a number of boys and girls under the direction of Miss H. C. Macdonald, was a feature that pleased everyone, the lads and lassies marching and dancing exceedingly well.

The accompaniments during the evening were skilfully played by Prof. Earle, Prof. Watts, Mr. Blanchard and Mr. Lamont, of Fredericton.

The National Anthem closed an entertainment of rare excellence, the best of the many good ones that have been given under the auspices of that popular organization, the Caledonian Club of Prince Edward Island.

IN HALIFAX.

The Boys of The Second Contingent.

(Special correspondence of THE EXAMINER)

HALIFAX, Jan. 23.—Two train loads of Mounted Police and Northwest Cowboys arrived in Halifax early yesterday morning. They comprised the second section of the Mounted Rifles and consisted of twelve officers, three hundred and thirty-three men and two hundred and eleven horses. They were the centre of attraction here to-day. "Oh, they are the boys!" A hard time the Boers will have who come within range of those chaps. The very sight of some of them will frighten you and make you feel decidedly small and unimportant. The horses they brought, too, with them were a surprise to Easterners. They are small and shaggy, and must be very hardy, for they looked quite fresh after their long railway journey. Some of them had only been ridden once or twice; and to say that they were wild—well the use to which they were put here does not express what some of the horses are at all. The bronche that we read about in the cowboy stories gives an idea of what they are like, and one who has seen them could well believe that those stories are not exaggerated. Kick—why they kick first with their hind legs, and then with their fore; they stand straight up, then jump on their hind legs, then on their fore. But the men don't mind them—go up alongside them, while others would run for their lives; and they take good care of them too. But the men themselves,—they appear to be almost as handy as their horses. Of course the Mounted Police look the better, nearly all of them must be six feet, fine big strapping fellows. Many of them are gentlemen by birth. They were great favorites about the city today. Crowds would stop on the streets and gaze after them and take interest in their every action when one or two would be walking down town. As for the cowboys, or ranchers, they are a mixed crew. They have no uniform. Some wear the big broad-brimmed hat with the rest of their clothes of various materials. Some have great fur coats, some far jackets. A number are dressed entirely in some kind of hide like chamois leather with fringe-trimming of the same material, and some look very much like the rougher and bigger farmers on the island. But they all certainly know now to manage horses. The Boers will probably find out that they all know a thing or two about handling a rifle. The horses are branded, many of them on the fore feet and the rest on the hips. Of course the other section, the eastern men, of the Mounted Rifles who have been here for several days although rather put in the shade by the wild and woolly western men, came in for no little share of visitor's admiring attention. This morning they were turned out on horseback without saddles. This afternoon the horses were each individually inspected by General Hutton. The horses were hard to handle and the men had a good deal of trouble in making them do what the commanding officer wanted them to do. However, they will no doubt be in splendid shape before the Milwaukee is ready to sail. Work on the Pomeranian is being rushed right along, and it is supposed that she will sail on Tuesday. Lieut. Colonel Irving and the other officers who have to do with the transporting, etc., are kept exceedingly busy. The tram-cars are making a big thing out of the contingent being in town. Every car going to and coming from the exhibition grounds is loaded. The news of Captain Hensley's death was received here with great regret and sorrow, and gloom was thrown over the whole city. Our Iron Wear Rubbers are acknowledged to be the very best on the market. Try them this time. R. H. Ramsay & Co.

Don't Blame The Doctor Sometimes a Physician is blamed for not curing a patient as soon as they think they ought to be. Sometimes a Physician wonders why a certain drug he prescribes does not have the expected beneficial action on his patient. Perhaps the Druggist is to Blame

If the drug ordered by the Physician is not used, but another substituted, because the druggist doesn't happen to have it in stock, if the drugs are not pure, if the prescription is not properly dispensed. Any one of these reasons would defeat the object of the physician, and might cause him to be unjustly blamed. We do all in our power to help the Physician by using only drugs of known purity, never substituting one drug for another, and personally doing everything in our power to help the physician, by seeing that every prescription is properly dispensed.
