British Defences.
A NEW SCHEME.
The War Office of Great Britain sometime ago made public a scheme for the defence of the Empire, which the cable agent somehow failed to notice. At a meeting of the United Service Institution, General Brackenbury, the head of the Intelligence Department of the War Office, stated, in the name of Mr. Stanhope, Secretary for War, that Lord Wolseley and other high authorities had matured the scheme referred to, which he proceeded to explain in detail. What it amounts to is this: England depends upon the navy, in the first instance, for the defence of her commerce, her colonies and her shores. But the navy cannot act in the one way in which it can efficiently guard those sacred trusts, unless it has secured harbors at home and abroad for victualing and repairs. The defence of these is the first duty of the army. The naval authorities absolutely require, in order to carry out their proper work, that they shall be relieved of all responsibility in regard to them. Yet, hitherto, no steps whatever have been taken to determine what garrisons would be required in time of war to hold these places, or what the efficiency of the navy depends upon from what sources the numbers required are to be provided. Now, however, steps have been taken to determine the minimum garrisons are which are required to hold the foreign coaling stations; the local patriotism of the colonies has been evoked to the fullest extent; and as far as possible, all numbers that could be provided on the spot have been arranged for. The whole sum required has not been taken in the current estimates; but enough has been done to provide for such fortresses abroad as have their armament ready, and it is the purpose of the Government to bring down complete estimates of what will really be required to establish the forces of the Empire upon an intelligible footing, complete both as regards these garrisons and all other matters. The question of the duties to be undertaken during war time by the volunteers has been taken up. The mode in which each portion should be employed in case of invasion has been fixed. An effort is to be made to develop volunteer field artillery, expressly on the ground that it is utterly impossible that the vast quantity of that arm required to supplement the existing volunteer infantry should be supplied by the creation of a force so expensive to keep up as the regular field artillery is. It has been provided that one-half the volunteers living in any seaport to be defended may be considered as available for garrison duty. Employing in this way for the necessary garrisons at home almost entirely militia and volunteers it has been found possible to complete the infantry garrisons without drawing to any large extent upon the regular infantry. At present there is a great lack of garrison artillery. General Brackenbury says in case of war Plymouth alone would require 5,300 trained artillerymen. "But," he says, "the very greatest number of regular artillerymen that could be spared is 1,000," and the deficiency would have to be made up by utilizing volunteer and militia artillerymen. Taking the whole country over, and reckoning the volunteer and militia artillery at its full strength, General Brackenbury finds there would be a deficiency of 3,000 garrison artillerymen for the defence of the United Kingdom; and in order to provide for these Mr. Stanhope has cut down the regular horse artillery, of which the regular army has a surplus as compared with foreign armies. Arrangements have also been perfected for keeping two thoroughly equipped army corps ready for embarkation at a moment's notice."

Too Much Cash.
Secretary of the Treasury Fairchild, in an interview, said:—
"The surplus revenues for the next fiscal year, from present indications, will not be less than one hundred million. After the 1st of July there will be no way of getting rid of this accumulation. Anticipation of interest would still leave a surplus of sixty millions, and to go into the market and buy bonds may be done by Congress at its coming session. It must be done wisely, too, and with reference to some defined policy for the benefit of the whole people. The decrease of the debt for eleven months of the last fiscal year was ninety-three millions. The debt, less cash in the treasury on June 1, was down to thirteen hundred million, the interest bearing portion of which is but eleven hundred million. Reduction of the debt by redemption of outstanding securities has come to the end of its tether. Now we must seek other means of relieving the treasury of its over-burdening resources. That will be the issue of next year, and will doubtless be an important issue before the people within the next eighteen months. My sole concern is to preserve the equilibrium of the nation's finances, and that the business and industrial interests of the country shall not be disturbed until measures of relief are adopted."

Another Tale of Horror.
The brig, Mounra, Capt. Halyard, arrived at Little Glace Bay on Monday, having on board two young men named James Mc-Carthy and Patrick Riley, who were taken from a dory at sea on the 1st inst. The two men belonged to the schr. Doyle, and while visiting trawls strayed from the vessel, and before resumed were drifting about for eight days, during which time they had neither food nor water, except the second last day, when they managed to catch a little water in their oil clothing. Both men suffered severely, particularly Riley, who is at present very ill. The doctor reports that some of his toes will have to be amputated. It is strange that notwithstanding these horrors have for years been of every day occurrence, no steps have been taken by the American government to compel vessels to supply their dories with necessary stores while visiting trawls.—North Sydney Herald.

Enjoy Life.
What a truly beautiful world we live in!
Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving up with disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and liver complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as biliousness, sick headache, costiveness, nervous prostration, indigestion, dizziness of the head, palpitation of the heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles 10 cts. Try it.

American Evictions.
Henry George's paper, the New York Standard, strongly denounces evictions by landlords. But Mr. George confines his attention to evictions nearer home than Ireland. He tells of a widow and seven children who were evicted from their house near New York and left with their little effects one stormy night by the roadside.
Next day they went to the poor house, where five of the children died. Mr.
George says that more tenants are evicted in New York city in a month than in all Ireland in a year. The New York landlords attended O'Brien's meeting and were exceedingly enthusiastic, but Mr. George can make no impression on them while he pictures the distresses of the New York tenants.

The effect after taking Adams' Botanic Balm is a soothing and controlling influence over any cough or cold, promoting rest, allaying the tickling sensation in the throat, and causing a healthy expectoration. Trial bottles 10 cts. Try it.
