The bride, given in marriage by her brother, James, wore a white street length gown of nylon sheer over taffeta. Embroidered appliques trimmed the bell shaped skirt and the fitted bodice, which was designed with a square neckline and short sleeves. Her tiered veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a cluster of matching roses, and she carried a cascade of red roses and white carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. John O'Neill, are planning on turning the farm over to their son for the winter months at least and move to the city to reside as Mr. O'Neill will not be able to work for some time following his long illness.

Mrs. Russell MacKay was in charge of the music and played Lohengrin's "Wedding March" as the wedding party entered the church. "Praise my Soul the King of Heaven" was sung by the choir and congregation, and a solo, "O Perfect Love" was rendered by Mrs. Edwin Johnson, both prior to the ceremony. During the signing of the register the soloist sang "I'll Walk Beside You".

St. Mark's Women Hear Panel On Amalgamation

The women of St. Mark's Anglican Church, Kensington, were invited recently by the leaders of the three church groups to the church hall where they heard a panel discussion on the theme "Let's take a look at ourselves". The members are concerned that three groups are opening within the church, when it is possible that one group composed of the present three would be quite as effective, preventing overlapping of activities and requiring only one set of officers instead of three.

The program followed a satisfying pot luck supper much enjoyed by young and older.

Rev. E. J. Flander was moderator for a well prepared panel discussion. Panelists were Mrs. E. J. Flander, Mrs. Elmer Moase, and Mrs. D. L. McInnis.

MARY HAWORTH

Mate's Neurotic Tensions Need Expert Counselling

Dear Mary Haworth: David and I have been married nearly 10 years. He is 12 years my senior, grew up during the 1930s depression, and I've never heard him speak happily of his childhood.

Each year I feel I know him less. He is a fanatic about work and very strict with the children - his son Mike, 10, by a former marriage, and our daughter Judy, 7. Now he is after me to get a job. I think he deeply resents having to support us... His yearly salary is about $10,000.

Dave insists on a clean house, which I like too. Anyone entering our house remarks how neat it is. Too neat, I sometimes think. It doesn't look lived-in, but that's how he wants it. He wants no guests, especially none with children who might "mess up" the house.

The children's bicycles must be parked against the left inside wall of the garage (no place else) when not in use, and baskets emptied. When Dave gets home from work he usually asks if I've washed the car; or how much weeding I've done.

He wants all of us up when he leaves early for work and expects us to work the same hours he does. Mike's duties include mowing the lawn, keeping garage and basement clean; but there are some tasks that only a man can do. Confronted with these, Dave gets so mad he slams doors, pounds the wall with his fist and burps his eye-glasses across the room.

Mike had a morning paper route this summer. His manager said to try to complete the deliveries by 7:15 a.m., but Dave insisted it be done by 6:15 a.m. Mike usually is up and out by 6 a.m. but one morning he overslept (one of the few times) and Dave awakened us all at 6 a.m. by pounding on the wall. He said Mike should quit the job if he couldn't get up; he also said he despised the boy.

Last month he sent Mike to sleep in the basement for three weeks, for getting fingerprints on his bedroom wall. Our mealtimes are sad affairs. Judy is asking if she can have her dinner earlier.

Sometimes I can't believe all this is happening. I grew up in a very relaxed family atmosphere, with many friends and relatives visiting us. Merely a physical I feel the strain of living this way, but don't know what to do about it. Can you advise me? T. R.

Dear T.R.: In condensing your letter by half, I've kept only the illustrative outlines of your difficulties, omitting reference to your husband's many years as a widely traveled Army officer, prior to his present civilian employment.

Three delegates of the Unitarian Service Committee are seen prior to their annual meeting held in the Dominion Building last week. From the left are Mrs. A. A. MacKinnon, director of ways and means, Dr. Lotta Hitchens, executive director of the USC in Canada, and Mrs. Fred Osborne, chairman of the Charlottetown branch of the USC.

Service Pins Presented At USC Annual Meeting

Dr. Lotta Hitchensmanova presided at the branch meeting of the P.E.I. Unitarian Service Committee, held at the packing rooms in the Dominion Building, Charlottetown last week, when reports on the year's work were given.

The treasurer reported that the sum of $54.31 had been realized which included donations placed in bottles throughout the area and collected weekly. At this point, Dr. Hitchensmanova asked that all cash donations be forwarded to headquarters in Ottawa before the end of the year.

Lena MacCallum reported 81 cigarettes completed and forwarded since May. Ordering material for this work through Miss Legge of Truro was discussed, and final arrangements left in hands of the committee.

Mrs. Ernest Bell, reporting for home sewing and knitting, told of work accomplished throughout the year and Mrs. A. B. Cosh, in her report included work completed by members of Queen Mary Needlework Guild, four hundred (400) articles having been contributed through the year.

From the shipping committee came word from Mrs. Moore, who told of over 6,000 lbs. shipped overseas since May. Assisting with this work were Messrs. Cairns, MacLean, Walker and Jenkins.

Mrs. Marjorie McKinnon, of ways and means reported the purchase of a new sewing machine. From evening mending...

The marriage took place in the Valleyfield United Church recently when Nancy Dianne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John MacKenzie, Valleyfield, West, became the bride of John MacDonald of Mr. and Mrs. Martin MacDonald of Heatherdale, P.E.I.

Rev. Graeme Fraser officiated at the double ring ceremony. Eva, Bears, Brooklyn, the soloist, sang "I'll Walk Beside You" prior to the ceremony and "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register. She was accompanied by Mrs. Preston Pearson of Heatherdale.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of white rayon taffeta with lace appliques, soft scooped neckline, and long 11 1/2 point sleeves. The full skirt fell from a fitted lace trim to a waist accented with a large back bow. Her headpiece was a pearl crown, which held a shoulder length veil of nylon tulle, with scalloped edges. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. Stephen Trainor of Lafleche, Quebec was matron of honor for her sister, and bridesmaid was Norma Van Buskirk, cousin of the bride, Rosindale, Mass. They wore street length dresses, of blue and pink nylon over taffeta and matching headpieces of tulle with pearl trim. They carried bouquets of carnations to match their gowns.

The groom was attended by his brother Ivan MacDonald and Joey MacKenzie, nephew of the bride. Ushers were Harvey MacKenzie, Valleyfield and Wayne MacKinnon, Brooklyn.

For the reception at the Hillside Inn, Montague, the bride's mother received wearing a coral dress with matching three quarter coat. Her accessories were white and her corsage, white carnations.

The bridegroom's mother was in a two-piece ensemble of flowered blue and white jersey with white accessories. She wore a corsage of white carnations. Mrs. Harvey MacKenzie, sister-in-law of the bride, circulated the guest book.

ELLEN'S DIARY

At Length The Sun Rose Above The Valley's Rim

We stopped a moment in the yard to watch the gentle fog, which these summery mornings veils lightly the September fields, until the sun climbs above the wooded hills eastward to lift it. So winsome it was, and quiet the surroundings, and serene. Only Chanticleer's sharp crow from the poultry-house to accent it, and Scampie's bark coming from a truck passing Lane's end... A pair of flyers flew into the orchard. A flicker came to search for breakfast on the heights of a weathered, and now useless, teleph pole. We came indoors with Peter on his early call, when well rested and happy, as children should be, he took up the affairs of his day.

"Do you ever forget to put salt in the cereal?" he inquired curiously, watching us stir salt and meal to the water bubbling in the pan. "Oh, odd times" we confessed. "The time we most remember - and it wasn't funny - was in girlhood, at home, you know?" He nodded.

"Your great-grandmother had a misgiving that morning which kept her in bed, so it fell to us to make breakfast. It happened there was a guest at the house; a man who had come from the Mainland - Nova Scotia, it was - to buy horses. Your great-grandfather was to drive him by horse and wagon of course, to those farms that were offering them for sale. This time it was a heavy team he wanted, but sometimes it was a driving horse, or perhaps smallish ones he looked for to work in the mines."

We stirred the cooking cereal, taking every care to have it the exact consistency, neither too thick, nor too thin, to meet with our husband's approval. It is, we have found, a wise procedure to start away the household-day with a good breakfast, one well made, and nicely served. We have discovered also that if James, by and large, is seemingly oblivious to women's fashions in dress, when a given his choice he prefers his fish served in a pretty china cup.

"And what then?" Peter questioned. "The cereal we used was fine oatmeal from the mill. Served with cool, creamy milk, it was good. And somehow the sugar or syrup or whatever sweetener one used, was extra sweet in those days... Porridge, homemade bread and butter, and tea, and eggs in the shell, that was the menu. Well, any one can boil an egg, if she watches the clock. But when it was almost time to lift them, we decided the few minutes it would take to go down cellar to the dairy for butter, would be neither here nor there in the cooking. And so... "Hard as golf balls, they'd be" he grinned.

"The cereal looked perfect we poured to the bowls. We were real proud of it, until your great-grandfather tasting his, remarked quietly, "I'm afraid Ellen, there is something missing from this. Did you?" he smiled. "forget something?"

"It would taste horrible, wouldn't it?" Peter shrugged. "Not much of a breakfast that" he observed.

And this morning, when at length the sun appeared above the valley's rim, lifting then the gentle September fog, our farmers found in the fields a perfect harvest day.

The "GOOD L'IL ANGEL" asks YOU OFFICE WORKERS

Have You Given Your Fair Share to the United Fund?

Office Workers: L'il Angel, we're sorry we forgot. You see, I guess we've been too close to the United Appeal, and the reminders have just passed us by. We've certainly had good intentions, and we even had a special talk from our employer, on top of all that.

L'il Angel: Right, but now, instead of bemoaning our fates, let's face the facts.

Office Workers: And they are?

L'il Angel: That the United Fund Campaign still needs that $281,876.00 very badly to carry on their work for 27 agencies.

Office Workers: That if every worker gets on the Payroll Deduction Plan, THE FAIR SHARE PLAN, we'll meet our objective.

Office Workers: You know we're really glad about the payroll deduction plan. That one-hour's pay per month that we'll be giving or 1/4-hr's pay per week, is so small, we'll never miss it, but would we remember. On payroll deductions, it's automatic.

L'il Angel: Say, you should be on my team. I mean like, you're sold.

Office Workers: We sure are... are you ALL YOU OFFICE WORKERS... I mean, Your Fair Share... like, NOW!
