A Vacation for Mr. Beecher.

NEARLY FOUR MONTHS TO BE SPENT IN EUROPE RESTING AND LECTURING.

The deacons of Plymouth Church voted unanimously to grant Mr. Beecher a vacation extending over nearly four months, during which time he will visit Europe in company with Mrs. Beecher. The leave of absence began on June 17, and will extend until October 1. Every one who has been at all intimate with the Plymouth pastor knows of his idea that his death will be a very sudden one, and how he refuses to make important engagements very far in advance. He says this feeling annoyed Mrs. Beecher, and he tried to drive it away, but it returns stronger every time. He feels somewhat depressed over the prospect of being away from home for so long a time as this journey will make necessary, but expects that it will greatly benefit him. "I shall gambol for the first month," he said, "and expect to grow fat; then for the rest of the time I shall lecture. After a brief trip across England, I shall cross to the continent and visit any places my fancy dictates. I have formed no plans yet, but Maj. Bond has fixed up a little lecturing programme which I shall endeavor to observe." Mr. Beecher hopes to be in England during the election if there is to be an appeal to the country, and would take great pleasure in trying to induce some Englishmen to coincide with Mr. Gladstone on the Home Rule question.

Holding His Own.

There was a commotion in the dimly-lighted parlor, and a moment later, when Maud's papa entered, Maud was sitting demurely in one corner of the room, while Maud's George occupied another.

"Well, George, how do you come on nowadays?" greeted the old gentleman cheerily.

"Oh, I guess I've been holding my own," replied Maud's George, with a smile.

"So, so! been holding your own, you sly dog? Assumed proprietorship already, eh? and she was willing to be held, I'll warrant. Well, well; times haven't changed much in twenty-five years, it seems," and the old gentleman chuckled, while Maud blushed, and George and the lamp tried to draw out of sight.

One night last week as Dr. Clark, an itinerant patent medicine dealer, was disposing of his nostrums on the southeast corner of Market and Third Streets, Williamsport, Pa., the Salvation Army came out in force and swept through Market Square. The parade was composed of men and women, and when they got near the medicine man's stand they broke forth in tumultuous songs, beating their drum and tooting their cornet. By and by the captain of the police proposed to charge through the crowd. Clark jumped from his wagon, and, shouting, "Follow me," faced the Army. In an instant the Salvation soldiers were surrounded by the angry crowd, and a scene of great confusion followed. Several men were knocked down in the melee. A hole was kicked into the drum, and the middle aged female drummer was knocked down on her back in the gutter. The police were tossed and carried around with the surging of the crowd. They were powerless to quell the disturbance, and it ended only when the Army, broken and disordered, fled to their hall. Dr. Clark talks of bringing a suit against the leaders of the Army.

An evening contemporary, referring ot the visit of congratulation made by the Anglican Bishop and ministers to Cardinal Taschereau, recalls the fact that when Bishop Mountain, the first bishop of the English Church in Canada, arrived in Quebec, the Roman Catholic Bishop of that city boarded the ship on which the former was and tendered him his congratulations. There is a neat story of this first Bishop of Quebec worth giving. He was before his translation a chaplain of George III., and meeting His Majesty one afternoon, the latter remarked that a see was vacant in America, and solicited advice as to a desirable appointee thereto, whereupon the chaplain remarked, "Your Majesty, if you had faith as a grain of mustard seed you would say to this Mountain, be thou removed into this see, and it should be done." It is needless to be said the appointment was made.—Ex.

Chicago doctors are interested over a boy of six years who has eyes like a cat. There is a congenital absence of a greater portion of the iris in both eyes. In a darkened room it was found that the child's eyes are similar in nearly all particulars to a cat's. There was an immediate expansion; and the eyes blazed in the dark like balls of fire. The child sees better in a subdued light or darkness, as too much light blinds him, and he distinguishes objects at a distance much more readily than when placed a few feet from his face. It is declared to be a genuine case of photophobia.

The London Standard says the Canadian Pacific Railroad is a political triumph, and an achievement the possibilities of which no one can foresee, as a military advantage which may yet be the saving of the empire. It is a contribution of our Canadian brethern to the organization and defence of the empire. Our duty is to show the world that we fully understand its importance.
