WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

Plans Made For Annual Supper, Entertainment

The monthly meeting of the Georgetown Parish Council of the Catholic Women's League was held recently in the parish hall. The meeting was opened with the League prayer led by Rev. L.B. Dooley. Presiding over the meeting was the president, Mrs. Alex Arsenault and a good attendance of members answered the roll call.

Minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Marcellus Gotell and the financial report was presented by the treasurer, Mrs. Rupert Wight. Both minutes and financial report were adopted. A considerable number of business items were successfully dealt with, including resolutions. Several members volunteered to collect League dues.

Plans were discussed for the holding of the annual supper and entertainment on July 24th. Work will commence on items for the fancy work booth. Following business discussion, the meeting was addressed briefly by Rev. L.B. Dooley and the meeting was then brought to a close by prayer and blessing.

NEW ANNAN UCW

The general meeting of the New Annan UCW was held recently in North Bedeque. The meeting opened with the purpose and a short prayer by the president, Mrs. Wilbur Stavert. Six members who had attended the presbyterial gave short reports. Mrs. Allison Fraser acted the roll and read the minutes of the last meeting. Mrs. Lou Walker, treasurer, gave a favourable report and an allocation of $1,000 was accepted.

It was decided to have a meeting of the executive at a convenient date. Travellers Rest members conducted the program, featuring stories of Dr. Florence Murray, a missionary for over 40 years, and closing with a poem "Ambassadors for Christ."

Bible study was conducted by North Bedeque.

Freetown had the worship and the Wilmot Valley ladies served lunch. The meeting closed with a hymn.

GLEN VALLEY WI

Mrs. Alton MacLean was hostess to the Glen Valley WI for their May meeting. The president, Mrs. Hensley Higgins, presided. After the singing of the Ode, the collect was repeated in unison. Roll call was answered by seven members.

The minutes of last meeting were read and approved. The treasurer's report was then given. The correspondence were read. It was decided to canvass the district for the Cancer Fund and Retarded Children's Fund.

The following committees were appointed: sick, Mrs. Arthur MacLean and Mrs. Hensley Higgins; program, Mrs. Elgon Hickox and Mrs. Cyrus Martin; school, Mrs. Cyrus Martin and Mrs. Roy Frizzel.

Mrs. Eldon Hickox invited members to her home for June meeting, roll call to be answered by paying twice the size of one's shoe.

Two contests were conducted and were won by Mrs. Alton MacLean and Mrs. Hensley Higgins. The meeting closed with The Queen. Lunch was served by the hostess and a social hour enjoyed.

SPRINGVALE WI

The May meeting of Springvale WI met at the home of Mrs. Bruce Stewart.

The vice- president, Mrs. Frank Crabbe, presided over the meeting, which opened with the Mary Stewart Collect repeated in unison. Roll call was answered by nine members and two visitors.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The business consisted of finalizing plans for a talented caravan. The school committee to purchase towels for the school. The sick committee is to purchase one baby spoon for a new baby in the district.

Mrs. Everett Clow and Mrs. Janie MacSween were appointed to the sick committee for the next three months and Mrs. Golden Dollar and Miss Edith McLeod to the school committee.

Correspondence consisted of a letter from the Cancer Society. It was decided to canvass district and that members would bring their donations to next meeting. A letter from the retarded childrens association was left until a later date.

The district convention is to be held on June 18th at Brackley Point at 2 p.m. All bills were moved paid. Three members donated money to the birthday box.

Hostess for June meeting is Mrs. Ralph Crabbe; lunch committee, Mrs. Frank Crabbe, Mrs. Ralph Crabbe and Mrs. Golden Dollar.

The meeting adjourned. Lunch was served by hostess and committee in charge.

BRISTOL WI

May meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Anselm LaPierre with 12 members answering roll call with donation for an auction sale.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. Remnants received were distributed to volunteer members to make articles for a bazaar to be held at a later date. Mrs. Patrick Sinnott was appointed to send cards to the sick.

One new member was welcomed and added to the membership. After correspondence read and reports of committees given the articles were auctioned by Mrs. John J. Perry and an hour of fun and enjoyment followed as well as adding a good financial sum to the funds.

The meeting closed with the Queen, followed by lunch and a social hour. Mrs. Stirling MacEwen invited the members to her home for the June meeting.

Liberal Women Elect President

Fourth Queen's Liberals' Women's Club held its annual meeting in Vernon May 16 with a good attendance of members.

The nominating committees elected the following slate of officers for the coming year: Honorary president, Mrs. Dougald MacKinnon; past president, Mrs. Bruce Judson; president, Mrs. Harold Smith; secretary, Mrs. J. Gillis; treasurer, Mrs. Locke Gillis; committees: finance, Mrs. Gordon Sheldow, Mrs. Harold Beaton, education, Mrs. Eric Gillis, Mrs. Lloyd Furness; membership, Mrs. Edward MacLeod; publicity, Mrs. Stanwood MacLeod.

An interesting report of the club's activities for the past year was given by the president Mrs. Judson.

A vote of thanks was given the retiring officers for their efforts during the previous year.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Lloyd Furness, Mrs. Gordon Sheldow, Mrs. James Halliday, and Mrs. Edward MacLeod.

Crisp Iceberg Lettuce Useable To The Last Leaf

ROLLING in by freight in pre-iced refrigerator cars holding thousands of heads, iceberg lettuce first came out of the west about two decades ago. A fabulous kind of lettuce that remained fresh, crisp and flavorful after tossing in a salad—a kind of lettuce usable to the last leaf.

Came a knock on the test-kitchen door.

There stood two delivery men carrying a huge wooden crate of the then - new Western iceberg lettuce packed in ice. Literally an enormous treat!

STORING IT

What to do with it!

"The guest room is unoccupied," I finally said. "The guest bathtub is a perfect place to keep the lettuce a few hours until we've taste - tested it."

At the time the Chef and I were radio broadcasting daily.

Next morning we took the remaining lettuce over to the studio. Visitors were thrilled with its crisp yet tender texture. We all talked about it over the air.

Shortly afterwards, my impressions and suggestions about how to use iceberg lettuce appeared in impressive newspaper ads and soon it was America's salad - sweetheart.

Recently the Chef and I visited Salinas, California, the center of the industry, where much of the crop is grown. This year brings a bumper crop. Acres upon acres of glowing green heads being harvested by machinery, trimmed vacuum - cooled and packed in fiberboard cartons ready to rush in refrigerated cars all over the country. When iceberg lettuce reaches your home, pop it promptly into the refrigerator, not only to protect the texture and flavor but to conserve the vitamins.

Mexican Guacamole Salad

1 medium head Western iceberg lettuce

1 ripe avocado
2 tbsp. lemon juice
½ c. mayonnaise
1 small onion
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. Tabasco
2 tomatoes, sliced

Core lettuce wash in running juice water; drain well. Place in poly bag; refrigerate.

Remove peel and pit from avocado; mash or beat pulp until smooth. Mix in lemon juice, mayonnaise, onion, salt and Tabasco.

Shred lettuce and arrange on platter; top with tomato slices.

Heap "guacamole" over tomatoes.

Serves 8.

TOMORROW'S DINNER

Chilled Tomato Juice
Crab Cakes Remoulade
Flaky Rice
Italian Green Beans with Pettis Pois
Fruit-filled Blintzes with Sour Cream
Hot or Iced Coffee or Tea Milk

Time Savers: Canned tomato juice; frozen crabmeat; frozen Italian green beans; frozen petits pois; frozen fruit - filled blintzes.

CRAB CAKES REMOULADE

(As served at Hotel Ambassador, Los Angeles, California).

1 lb. flaked thawed crabmeat
2 c. fine - chopped celery
2 tsp. chopped parsley
½ tbsp. minced onion
5 drops Tabasco
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
2 tsp. salt
⅛ tsp black pepper
1 egg
¼ c. milk
1½ c. seasoned bread crumbs
Western iceberg lettuce leaves
Sauce Remoulade

Combine and mix all ingredients listed up to egg.

Catch up mixture with an ice cream scoop. Form into flat cakes.

Beat egg and milk together. Coat crab cakes with this mixture; then roll each in seasoned bread crumbs. Let stand 10 min. to set coating.

Fry until golden brown in deep corn oil at 375 deg. F. (hot enough to brown a cube of bread in 1 min.). Drain on paper towels.

Serve each crab cake in a lettuce leaf. Pass Sauce Remoulade. (recently columned).

Serves 6 to 8.

THE CHEF'S CHICKEN-EGG SALAD LETTUCE ROLLS

In the center of crisp medium sized iceberg lettuce leaves put 1 tablespoon each fine - chopped chicken - egg salad. Roll up; fasten each roll with a pick; chill and arrange on a platter.

Pass with cocktails or aperitifs.

MARY HAWORTH

Held Between Two Worlds Son Identifies With Rich

Dear Mary Haworth: My husband and I were married during the depression of the 1930s. Absolutely nothing was given to us, dowry-wise, aside from a modest assortment of conventional wedding gifts.

We went through extremely lean years, taking for granted that whatever we couldn't afford on our own earned income we would do without. It simply never occurred to us that his parents or mine might lend us a hand financially. They, like us, would have considered the idea presumptuous and unwarranted.

But now we have a son, 29, married, who holds a different view. He has studied in Europe on two scholarships and is soon to get his PhD from Harvard, also on a scholarship.

He enters the business world next September at a salary easily three times more than his father ever made at the same age. However, because he worked his way through college, during years when we hadn't the money to help him, he is telling us now that we owe him equivalent cash recompense! He considers it our moral obligation.

He has set his heart on a trip to New Zealand and wants $500 cash from us to launch it. The fact that we got no such largesse from our parents doesn't alter his views in the least.

I am sensitive, too, that if we were to give him the money, and should find ourselves in financial need in later life and were to ask him or his wife for, say, medical help, they would be outraged. They would feel that we were imposing.

They would recall the time when Dad was making $11,000 a year. They would wonder what became of all that money.

As I am not a martyr type, I am inclined to stick to my lifelong policy of self- reliance as a present example to him. Yet when he says a friend assures him we should be delighted to make the New Zealand trip possible, I wonder. (Me and Scrooge?) C.D.

Dear C.D.: In a sense your son is caught between two worlds, it seems. His family background represents the financially hard-pressed world of the so-called little man, obliged to claw his way up to economic self-sufficiency.

Your son's school environment on the other hand, during his studies abroad and at Harvard, undoubtedly has brought him into contact with a more expansive world where a great many families transmit material advantages to their adult offspring as a matter of course.

He is trying to get a toehold in that world, apparently, and he feels that a boost from his parents, in the form of a trip to New Zealand this summer, would help him make the grade. But he is unable to communicate the gist of his dreams and drives to you, maybe because he's not the articulate type, or possibly because you no longer speak each other's language in the wake of his long-time exposure to modes of thinking and styles of living that are alien to your experience.

Unlike you, who deeply subscribe to the logic of self-reliance, your ingrained social creed, a family tradition until now, your son is quite mixed-up as regards his newly minted social philosophy with respect to getting- and- spending.

Despite his impressive schooling, it seems he hasn't matured, as yet, into clear adult perspective as to who he is, where he has been, where he is going and how to get there.

His current insistence that you owe him the cash equivalent of the schooling he earned for himself— when you couldn't afford it for him— has a childish sound. It suggests that he identifies with the rich, due to elbow- rubbing, and feels entitled to share their privileges insofar as he can wangle them. But, unrealistically, he overlooks the fact that their histories and his aren't comparable.

In my view, you don't owe him a cent for the schooling he's earned. Why doesn't he negotiate a loan to finance the trip to New Zealand if he has big earnings in prospect and the kind of character that warrants credit? M.H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Guardian.

CASTRO SNEAKS HOME

HAVANA (AP)—Prime Minister Fidel Castro slipped back into Cuba unnoticed as public attention focused on the death of Pope John Monday. Castro's arrival from Russia took President Osvaldo Dorticos by surprise. No one met the bearded leader — not even his bodyguards. An informed source said Castro phoned Dorticos from the airport and then went downtown in a taxi.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Plumage Of Goldfinches Blends With New Leaves

Today the goldfinches were here, their mostly yellow plumage blending beautifully with the gold-green of the new leaves about.... We fancy that he, no doubt a practical down-to-earth fellow, will be looking over the dandelions that lengthen round stems in the grass of the meadows, conjecturing as to how long it will be before first heads turn downy to make a silken lining for the nest the two will presently fashion. We think, with a chuckle, that it is not improbable that even as she stops a bit childishly to admire and exclaim over the blossoms about, she will know, because nature attends to such intuitive feminine skills, the exact day when these delicate gleanings will begin!

Beautiful our day was. Beautiful too is this night now softly overlaid with the moon-glow. It was a day for the farmers here to remember gratefully, now that the cropping had commenced, that the first fencing had been done and the requirements of manure spread to the fields, so that they could come with minds at ease to its work. Before the dew-lift of this morning was over, operators of the machines were come to the cultivating, tractors beating out sprightly tunes on this and that field of the name. At the close of his schoolday, Mack happily took his turn there with the rest.

We suspect that in time, Alex will enter his apprenticeship at the same, though, up to this, he shows little interest in handling machines. Nor in being off to the fields with his elders, as is usual with other little lads of the farms. He is obviously happy to be with his sister now on holiday, who in a varied role fits in nicely with the work of the farm. Now they assist James in caring for the lambs; again they run to round up a cow or a calf out of bounds. Or it may be the two are away by machine to carry out some needed mission of the place.

This morning it was to a clinic in the old school down the River Road they went, where in a preschool adventure he received his vaccination against that disease, so deadly in years that are past. There were no complaints on his part, no tears, the young ordeal accepted calmly as something to be endured, for he is a sensible chap, this lad of six years.

Inclined to study, he learns words wherever he finds them—on packages from the store, in the Funnies, in TV headings or wherever an attractive word claims attention.

By this, it is a June-wind that wanders over the fields, and, above, is a smokey haze of blue. And enjoying much the sun and delight of it all, we say "Was there ever a cropping-time so lovely!"

"Do you know what I have a hankering for these days?" an old-timer of farmer twinkled today. 'When the dandelions come fresh and new as they are now—I mind our orchard was full of them— I wish for a glass of the wine my mother used to make from them. Oh, we drank it only when it was new, Ellen" he smiled, "but how I remember its flavor! A part of the season, it was—a tonic."

James in the old armchair, puts by the newspaper and yawns.

"Well, I reckon it's bedtime, Ellen" he offers. "That bantam got us up fairly early this morning."

Until tomorrow— Diary — Good-night.....

White Elephant Sale Planned

KENSINGTON — Fifteen members of the Royal Canadian Legion Ladies Auxiliary, Kensington branch, and two visitors, attended the regular meeting held, at the home of the president, Mrs. Earle MacKay, Sea View.

Mrs. MacKay presided and used for the first time, the gavel received from the provincial president, Mrs. Roper, one of a number presented to local branches.

Correspondence included a thank you note from a member, also letters from the Retarded Children's Society, thanking the auxiliary for a contribution; and the Salvation Army, asking the auxiliary to conduct a campaign for funds in the town. Receipt books were given out.

The treasurer, Mrs. D. L. McInnis, reported the sum of $200 added to the funds from the pot luck supper.

The secretary, Mrs. Lea Crane gave a resume of the highlights of the provincial annual meeting at Ellerslie. She said the charter is to be displayed at the Legion Home of the president each year, and for the centennial celebrations will be displayed at the new Charlottetown Legion Home. A suggestion was made that officers should be elected for a two year term. The Provincial and local constitutions will in future be printed under one cover.

It was decided that the local annual meetings may be held in any month suitable to the branch, as circumstances vary in town and country. A motion was passed that the sum of $1 be charged by the entertaining auxiliary for the meal served at the annual meeting in future, the next one to be held in Charlottetown.

A White Elephant sale was planned for the June meeting. Lunch committee will be Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Elmer Cole and Mrs. Lea Crane.

Lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. William Mill and Mrs. Gerald Mill.
