The Digby Seizure.

The vessel will be libeled and taken into the Court of Vice-Admiralty, which is an Imperial court, the judge being appointed by the Imperial authorities. He is invariably the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, at present Hon. James Macdonald, formerly Minister of Justice. From his decision there is an appeal to the Privy Council of England. The vessel will be charged with the offence of preparing to fish within Canadian waters, and the proof will be that she came into the harbor of Digby and purchased bait. This, by a decision of Chief Justice Sir William Young, given in the case of the American fishing schooner Nickerson, and not reversed by the Privy Council, is under our Fisheries Act deemed to be an act coming within the meaning of the words "preparing to fish." The same point was raised in the Vice-Admiralty Court at St. John, N. B., over which Mr. Hazen presided, in the case of the American fishing vessel Whitefawn, and Mr. Hazen then decided that the mere fact of purchasing bait was no proof that the vessel was preparing to fish "within the three-mile limit." He held that the offence against the fishery laws must be committed within the limits over which we have territorial jurisdiction, and that further proof than the purchasing of bait was necessary. Under his decision it would therefore be necessary that further evidence should be adduced showing that other acts indicating "preparing to fish within the three-mile limit" were committed. If the bait had been purchased in a New Brunswick port, and no other offence had been committed, Capt. Scott would have had to watch the David J. Adams till she got beyond the three-mile limit. But it is otherwise in Nova Scotia, under the decision in the Nickerson case. The David J. Adams, in addition to purchasing bait, did not, it is alleged, report to the Collector of Customs though she remained in the port a longer time than the Customs laws of Canada permit any vessel to remain without making entry. The penalty for this offence is $400, and any officer of the department has the right to detain a vessel for breaking this provision of the Customs Act. The owner has the right to reply, and the suit will then be tried out in the ordinary way. If a foreign vessel comes into a Canadian port to secure the services of seamen, or for any other purpose for which no express penalty is provided, the master may be indicted for a misdemeanour under the Imperial Statute of 1819, which provides that American fishing vessels shall only enter our harbors for the four purposes of shelter, of repairing damages, of purchasing wood, and of obtaining water.

A Curious Shipwreck.

A daily paper gives the following account of a singular shipwreck, from the lips of Captain White, of the brig Ada L. White, which was abandoned and lost on her recent voyage from Rio Janeiro to New York. Captain White said it was fine summer weather, with the mercury standing at 80 deg. in the shade, when they left Rio, December 16, with 11,248 bags of coffee on board. The voyage continued without incident until the brig was off Jamaica, when a gale came howling from the north-west, and lasted for three days. But it was several days later, when 160 miles out at sea, off Hatteras, that the great storm which wrecked them was encountered. The waves ran high; the wind blew almost a hurricane, and lashed the ocean into foam; wave after wave broke over the ship, and finally enough water got below to wet the cargo. Then the coffee began to swell, the bags burst and more water got in. The coffee which was forced out of the open sacks floated into the hold. Meanwhile the fury of the storm increased, and the sea was terrible to behold. In the midst of these scenes of peril a new and terrible danger appeared. Because of the disabled pumps which were choked with coffee, the eleven thousand bags of coffee became completely saturated, and the whole mass rose like yeast. With a shock that shook the vessel to her centre, the decks burst open with a crash; as of thunder. The hatches were wrenched off as if they were but paper, and great seams opened in the vessel, which admitted the sea in torrents. All hope was now lost. Nothing was to be done but leave the ship as speedily as possible, for she was already settling in the white waters.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate,

DECIDED BENEFIT.

DR. JOHN P. WHEELER, Hudson, N. Y., says: "I have given it with decided benefit in a case of inebriation of the brain, from abuse of alcohol."

According to Bradstreet's reports from twenty-two cities of the United States, 110,000 men have been granted shorter hours without striking, the largest number in any one place being 35,000, Chicago packing-house employees. The total number reported as having struck for shorter hours last week was 151,000.

St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary officials have adopted resolutions protesting against charges made against them in connection with the recent revolt, and calling for an official investigation.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little shrub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It softens the child, softens the gums, always all pain, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

Mysterious Poisoning Case.

Fresh light has been unexpectedly thrown upon the mysterious death of Nanine Foiret, at Paris, whose step-mother is held on suspicion of having poisoned her with chloroform. When Mme. Foiret came as a bride to Tours some two years ago, she brought with her a woman named Huret, as her maid, who has remained in her service ever since. The detectives who have charge of the case felt sure that if Mme. Foiret committed the crime, Huret, if not an active participant, would at least have guilty knowledge on the subject. The woman was arrested, and by a system of terrorism permitted in some French prisons, a confession was obtained. She says she helped her mistress to murder the young girl. They went together into her room while she was asleep, and before she awoke they succeeded in fastening her hands together by the wrists. The woman then held a wet cloth firmly over the girl's mouth to prevent any outcry, while Mme. Foiret placed a sponge saturated with chloroform to her nostrils till she became unconscious. They then took a small porcelain funnel, to which a piece of rubber tubing was attached, and removing the wet cloth and opening the girl's mouth they put the tube down her throat and poured a quantity of chloroform into the funnel. They then removed their apparatus, which they subsequently got rid of, and releasing the girl's hands they placed them quietly by her sides, and removing all traces of struggling left her. The girl could never have awakened, for Huret says that on going into the room the following morning Mme. Nanine was lying in the position in which they had placed her after administering the fatal dose, and she looked as if she was still sleeping. Mme. Foiret denies the woman's story, and in the meantime the detectives are searching for the funnel and the empty chloroform bottle.

His Example Better than His Precept.

The Montreal Herald advises the Dominion Government to abandon the position taken on the bait question. The Herald's opinion on this matter is entitled to some consideration inasmuch as that journal is supposed to express the views of Hon. Peter Mitchell. Mr. Mitchell when minister of marine, had occasion to defend Canadian fisheries from encroachment and this duty he performed with the vigor and enthusiasm which has always characterized him. Mr. Mitchell is supposed to be a little wary in these modern days, and perhaps he has a less sense of responsibility now than he had when a member of the administration. For this reason or some other, the Herald's advice does not seem to quite accord with the former practice of the ex-Minister of Marine and Fisheries. The Minister was far from yielding to the threats and high language of United States senators. He stoutly protested against the timid and weak policy of the home government and steadily maintained the rights of Canada. Minister Foster would do better so far as this matter is concerned, to do as Peter Mitchell did, than to do as Peter Mitchell is now supposed to be advising. Perhaps it repents the ex-minister that he authorized the seizure of the Nickerson and other United States vessels charged with procuring bait in Canadian waters, but we do not think there is any occasion for penitence on this score.

For Married Women.

Always remember that you are married to a man and not a god; be prepared for imperfections.

Once in a while let your husband have the last word; it will gratify him and be no particular loss to you.

Do be reasonable; it is a great deal to ask under some circumstances; reasonable women are rare—be rare.

Anticipate the discovery by your husband that you are "only a woman"; if you were not he would not care about you.

Remember that servants are made of the same material as you are; a little coarser grained, perhaps, but the same in essentials.

Let your husband read the newspapers at breakfast; it is unsober, but then it is only a trifle after all, and he likes it.

Read something in the papers besides fashion notes and society columns; have some knowledge of what is going on in foreign countries.
