

Early Start Is Planned For Frozen Food Plant

Site clearing and excavation for the Fraser Valley Procter-Foods Company Limited food processing plant in Montague will start as soon as spring weather permits the ground to be workable. Gordon Reid, construction superintendent, said Saturday.

In the meantime, construction materials, sand and gravel are being trucked to the site. Trucks are taking advantage of the low night temperatures, which permit, when the temperature drops to 20 degrees or lower, hauling without weight restrictions on provincial highways between 5 a.m. and 10 a.m.

Under an agreement reached by President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan at Nassau in December, Britain will build its own submarines and supply its own nuclear warheads.

The agreement on the missile purchase was signed by U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk and British ambassador Sir David Ormsby Gore in a meeting at the state department Sunday.

Terms are expected to be made public next Tuesday when the Macmillan government plans to present it to Parliament. Meantime authorities who confirmed the initialing of

Children Used By Sc Worker

PEMBROKE, Ont. (CP) — School principals complained Saturday that school children were promised a holiday Monday if they took Social Credit campaign literature home to their parents.

"The literature comes from us and not the promises," said Ross Brubaker, a Baptist minister and Social Credit candidate in Renfrew North.

School principals said children returned to school after 4 p.m. Friday to say a man on the street handed them envelopes marked "to parents" and told them they would have a day off school if they took the envelopes home with them.

J. R. McCrimmon, principal of Highview Public School, said he also had calls from parents

Montague Ladies Curling Club Elects New Executive

MONTAGUE — Leona Sinclair was elected president of the Montague Ladies Curling Club at the annual meeting in the club rooms. The meeting was conducted by Dorothy Nicholson, with 22 members present.

The minutes were read by Connie Ings who also presented the financial report for the year, which showed a substantial balance on hand.

The report of the games committee was read by Margaret Sullivan. The various reports showed a most successful year, both socially and financially.

In her address, the retiring president gave a brief resume of the activities of the club and expressed her appreciation for the generous cooperation of the members during their term of office. Special mention was made of the fact that membership had been greatly increased with the addition of a number of the lady teachers from the regional high school.

Other officers elected were: vice-president, Margaret Sullivan, and secretary, Margaret Ings.

The following committees were appointed: ways and means, Doris O'Connor, Ruth MacDonald, Mae Jamieson; entertainment, Doris Jones, Betty Gallant, Barbara Mabon; membership, Eileen Johnston, Evelyn MacLure; provincial delegates, Connie Ings, Eileen Johnston; club games convener, Dorothy Nicholson; outside games convener, Mary Nicholson.

A number of suggestions for next year's activities were presented and discussed. A substantial sum was voted towards the Men's Club to assist in renovating the observation room.

Arrangements were finalized for holding the closing banquet when the various trophies will be presented as follows: O'live Pole Trophy, Mary Nicholson, Edith Clay, Mae Jamieson, Annie Beasly, Pepler Trophy, Mary Nicholson, Dorothy Nichols on, Mae Jamieson, Ruth MacDonald, Jamieson Trophy, Edith Clay, Mae Jamieson, Phyllis Warner, Blanche Smith; Yeo Trophy, Lillian MacDonald, Leona Sinclair, Ruth MacDonald, Betty Gallant.

brought out at 5:30 a.m. Sunday.

Dr. de Groot refused to give her name to reporters, saying she was only doing her job and wanted no publicity. She was identified by policemen at the scene.

Rescue crews used pneumatic drills and portable saws to cut their way through to the trapped man. As every foot of the passage was cleared props were put in to prevent further collapses.

A pile of rubble thrown onto St. Catherine Street—one of the city's main commercial thoroughfares—was 25 feet high by the time the rescue was completed.

Gingras was freed five hours after the building collapsed. Leggett's father, himself a veteran of 41 years service before he retired about seven years ago, also entered the building and talked with his son.

At midnight, six hours after the collapse, he said his son was in good spirits and joking with the rescue teams cutting their way through to him.

"I told him to keep his chin up—what else could I do?" he said. "It's a tricky situation. One false move and everything will collapse on him."

The rescue squads got enough props around the pinned fireman to free him at 2 a.m. Remillard's body was brought out 25 minutes later.

The silent, exhausted rescue workers recovered McManus' body at 5:30 a.m.

A civic funeral for the dead fireman was scheduled tentatively for Wednesday.

The burned-out building was due to be torn down shortly. It already had been expatriated by the city to permit widening of St. Urban Street and the annex windows were plastered with signs reading "forced to sell."

EXTEND PROGRAM OTTAWA (CP)—The northern affairs department said Wednesday its 1968 winter work program in national parks and historic sites has been extended for two months until May 31.

The department said the extension will provide additional employment for about 1,000 men at a cost of $300,000.

Britain Agrees To Purchase Polaris Missiles

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States and Britain signed an agreement Saturday under which the U.S. will sell Britain up to 100 Polaris missiles for arming Britain's projected nuclear submarine force.

Under an agreement reached by President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan at Nassau in December, Britain will build its own submarines and supply its own nuclear warheads.

The agreement on the missile purchase was signed by U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk and British ambassador Sir David Ormsby Gore in a meeting at the state department Sunday.

Committal service was at the Dundas United Church cemetery.

MONTREAL

The two survivors were located about 30 minutes later. Gingras was found pinned across his legs by a large beam but Leggett was completely under rubble and a tangle of beams and pipes.

HEARD CALLS FOR HELP — The first indication that he was there came when rescuers heard him calling for help.

A young woman doctor, Genevieve de Groot, entered the wreckage-strewn building and crawled on her stomach under the rubble to administer morphine to Gingras until he could be freed.

She remained on the scene, despite warnings from the firemen that she was endangering her life, until the last body was rescued.
