Towel Outpoints Howard To Retain Lightweight Ch'ship

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (Reuters) — South Africa's Willie Towel successfully defended his empire lightweight boxing title when he outpointed Richie (Kid) Howard of Halifax in 15 rounds at the outdoor rand stadium here Saturday night.

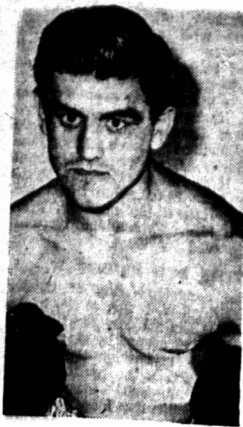

A crowd of about 6,000 saw the South African gain a decisive victory. Towel's displayed superb boxing skill in warding off the furious spasmodic attacks of the chunky, broad-shouldered Canadian lightweight champion.

Towel often turned defence into attack, ramming home a hard straight right, while his classic straight left which built up a solid points lead, was seldom out of Howard's face.

CHAMP IMPRESSIVE

It was Towel's most impressive performance in several months. He showed an aggression which delighted the crowd.

There were times when Howard countered well and once, in the ninth round, he had the champion in trouble.

Officials awarded Towel eight rounds and Howard five, with two even.

Tests Show More Fishermen Means More Fish To Catch

TORONTO (CP)—Take a body of water within commuting distance of 1,500,000 people, give anglers virtually a free rein for about 11 months of the year, and the result should be disastrous to the fish population.

In Lake Simcoe, it isn't. If anything, the lake is under-fished. Some of the reasons for this are outlined in a recent analysis of southern Ontario's favorite fishing hole, published by the province's department of lands and forests.

BIOLOGIST'S STUDY

"Fishing in Lake Simcoe," a 136-page study by Dr. H. R. McCrimmon of the department's fish and wildlife biological staff, shows that the lake has stood up well for more than a century against an assault by commercial and sport fishermen. The biggest protective factors appear to be its temperature at a balmy, Florida-like temperature of 70 degrees.

The apple tree was planted 10 years ago by former mine employee Leo St Onge of Kirkland Lake. When he retired, two colleagues, Ernest Croxall and James Reynolds, took over the task of watering the tree.

When other miners tossed orange-seeds from their lunchboxes into the earth surrounding the tree, three orange trees sprang up. The tallest now stands two feet high.

All the trees disregard the seasons and are continually shedding leaves and growing new foliage. To top up their development miners have recently begun to feed them Vitamin A plant food. Superintendent A. Tyson of Toronto's parks department says the apple tree is about 60 per cent retarded due to lack of sunlight. A normal 10-year apple tree would be 6 to 8 feet high and would have borne fruit after five years.

ELUSIVE PICKEREL

Pickereel are caught in numbers in May near the mouth of the Talbot River, one of 35-odd tributaries, but become elusive when they move into the lake. Of 500 fish tagged in the river in 1951, only one was reported caught in the lake later in the year.

Lake Trout, also abundant, come more easily. The study estimates that about 5,000 are taken by trolling every year and many others by winter fishing through the ice.

Still, there are lots of other fish. Dr. McCrimmon's check list names 43 species, including six game fish — whitefish, herring, lake trout, pike, perch and small-mouth bass — in catchable numbers. Six others — salmon, rainbow and brook trout, muskellunge pickereel and largemouth bass — are present but not plentiful. The remainder are coarse fish.

Just how prolific the lake can be is shown by some of the book's figures on the early commercial

One-Sided Grudge Match

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK (AP) — Archie Moore is writing letters again. Or possibly it should be want ads, as the venerable heavyweight, who by all ring standards should have been stuffed and placed on the mantelpiece long ago, is making a not too subtle effort to lure as many customers to Chicago Stadium Nov. 30 as he can to see him tear Floyd Patterson limb from limb.

Archie waged a personal campaign to gain a bout with Rocky Marciano, sending out messages by wire, mail and carrier pigeon to all parts of the country extolling his virtues as a fighter and pointing out that if he didn't get the title match justice would indeed be blind.

He got the bout, put up a very good fight, was knocked out, and now is back claiming the championship on the strength of a victory over one James J. Parker of Barrie, Ont., in Toronto.

The Patterson bout has not been getting too much publicity, proaching Olympic Games. So Moore has taken matters into his own hands.

PRIDE Hurts

The gist of his letter, or circular, or want ad, is that he has a grudge against Patterson for disparaging his ability as a fighter. That was a blow to Archie's pride, and when Archie's pride is injured he hurts all over. The grudge is built on the sandy foundation of a remark by Gus d'Amato, Patterson's manager, to the effect he and his fighter considered Hurricane Jackson a much more difficult problem than Archie Moore. Patterson defeated the windmilling Jackson to get the Moore bout for which Archie claims squatter's rights.

Now most communications coming from fighters can be traced to the facile mind and pen of press agents. But we have an idea Moore wrote this petulant piece himself, or at least dictated it. It sounds like he talks, using rather stilted, condescending words couched in scholarly phrases.

PITTS PATTERSON

"They tell me Patterson is a fine young prospect, and, if he'd asked me, I would have been glad to take him in the gym and give him the benefits of my 20 years as a professional," Archie writes. "But that is out now. The lesson I give him when we get together at Chicago Stadium will not be conducive to furthering his athletic education."

He goes on to say he is "not without pity for the boy, because I know what it's like to be thrown in over one's head."

After inferring what will happen to Patterson when he tried one of his "unbelievably amateur-

John Conroy Hopes To Bring Field Hockey To Canada Soon

By KEN METHERAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer
LONDON (CP) — John Conroy, who might be called the Maurice Richard of field hockey, will emigrate to Canada later this year with hopes of putting the grass game in a new light there.

At 27, Conroy is the mainstay of Britain's field hockey team now in Australia for the Olympics. He's regarded as one of the game's all-time greats.

"I am planning to go to Canada right after the Olympics," Conroy told a reporter before leaving for Melbourne. "I hope to get into the export business — probably in Vancouver."

The six-foot, 160-pound Britisher who has won 20 international caps in five seasons with England, said he had been considering settling in Canada for a number of months.

"I think Canada and Canadians have a great future ahead of them and I want to become a Canadian and work for, and share in, that future."
Conroy learned his brilliant ball control and sound tactical sense in India, land of the grass hockey masters, where he was born. His father, a British army officer, was seconded to the Indian army after the First World War.

He made his first appearance in British field hockey circles in the 1950-51 season, playing for Mid-Surrey at centre forward. The following year he represented Combined Services at inside left and played three times for England at outside left—a mark of his versatility.

He has been in the England forward line ever since, usually at inside left, and last year single-handed scored half of England's 16 goals in four international matches.

FIELD HOCKEY TOUGH

"I am hoping I'll be able to encourage grass hockey in Canada and possibly take it to a higher level," said Conroy.

But he emphasized that sport would be strictly a sideline after the Olympics.

"I have been playing hockey almost non-stop since 1951. Now I want to get down to some hard work and start concentrating on a business career."

Conroy also said he had been "horrorified" to learn from friends in Canada that many Canadians regard field hockey as a girls' game.
"Hockey, field hockey, is a real tough masculine sport. I guess we'll have just to try to substitute long pants for skirts."

Have Orchard 3,000 Ft. Down

KIRKLAND LAKE, Ont. (CP) Nature-loving miners at Sylvanite Gold Mine here have their own miniature orchard's flourishing 3,000 feet underground.

More than half-a-mile beneath a Northern Ontario forest the miners tend a 42-inch apple tree and three small orange trees planted in a tub.

Substitute for the sun's chlorophyll-making rays is a 200-watt bulb which burns continuously. The mine's fresh-air system keeps the trees well-ventilated and maintains the temperature at a balmy, Florida-like temperature of 70 degrees.

The apple tree was planted 10 years ago by former mine employee Leo St Onge of Kirkland Lake. When he retired, two colleagues, Ernest Croxall and James Reynolds, took over the task of watering the tree.

When other miners tossed orange-seeds from their lunchboxes into the earth surrounding the tree, three orange trees sprang up. The tallest now stands two feet high.

Superintendent A. Tyson of Toronto's parks department says the apple tree is about 60 per cent retarded due to lack of sunlight. A normal 10-year apple tree would be 6 to 8 feet high and would have borne fruit after five years.

No blossoms or fruit have appeared on any of the trees.
