
SDU OPENS BLOOD DONOR CLINICS

St. Dunstan's University yesterday held its annual blood donor clinic in the college gym. 173 out of a possible 225 turned out and donated. Red Cross officials believe this to be less than normal for the student body. There is a competition for an inter-class trophy and SDU is competing with Prince of Wales College for the Centennial Trophy. From the left are: Winston Cannon, Eileen Grant, Richard Manse and Ray Malone, keeping a tally on the various class donors.

LOCAL BRIEFS

IS PATIENT

Peter Clarkin, 187 Dorchester Street, is a patient in the Charlottetown Hospital.

173 Students Donate Blood During Clinic

Keen inter-class competition was in evidence everywhere at the Red Cross blood donor clinic at St. Dunstan's University yesterday afternoon when 173 donors actually went through as donors. However, representatives of the student body checked off a considerably larger number who reported to register for the competitions but were ineligible as blood donors.

Winston Cannon, chairman of the Red Cross blood donor committee for the Students' Council at St. Dunstan's, said last night that no decision could be reached as to the winners of the inter-class competition until the clinics conclude on Friday night.

Mrs. Cannon explained that many of the "day students" who attend St. Dunstan's would probably be attending the clinic at Zion Church Hall since it had not been convenient for them to report at yesterday afternoon's clinic at St. Dunstan's Gym.

A large number of students at St. Dunstan's volunteered their services as helpers to the Mobile blood donor team from Halifax which conducts all the clinics.

Island Artists Work Exhibition Feature

In keeping with its practice of featuring exhibitions of the works of contemporary Island artists, St. Dunstan's University will present an exhibition of oils, pen and ink, and collage by Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Murawski tonight in the board room of the Kelley Memorial Library.

Mr. Murawski is a mathematics professor at SDU. He became interested in oil painting about five years ago and studied for a year at the Art Institute in Chicago. Prior to that time his art experience was confined to student publications at DePaul University in Chicago where he served as art editor of the yearbook and library magazine, and cartoonist for the college newspaper.

Mrs. Murawski studied design, drawing, and sculpture at Mundelein College in Chicago. She began painting in oils three years ago, but the combination of a teaching career and her household duties confined her to painting only on weekends. Since leaving the teaching field last year she has been able to devote more time to her painting.

The 25 works on display were completed by the Murawskis since they arrived in Prince Edward Island last September.

Many of their earlier paintings are owned in private collections in such places as Vienna, Seattle, Hawaii, Honolulu, Washington, D.C., and Chicago. Mr. Murawski did several murals in private homes in Chicago before coming to P.E.I., and one of Mrs. Murawski's sculptures is on permanent display at Mundelein College.

The exhibition will continue until Monday, April 13.

Earlier exhibits at SDU featured the works of Rev. Adrian Arsenault, Mrs. Aileen Brophy of Summerside, and Fernando Vidal, Charlottetown.

Allied Youth Meets Today

Some 150 high school students from across the Island meet here today for a two-day conference on the alcohol problem.

At this afternoon's session, the keynote address will be given by Dr. Thomas Skipp, chairman of the board of trustees, Allied Youth, Washington, D.C.

Today's schedule includes a sing-song, an informal dance, discussion groups, and tomorrow sees the best Allied Youth Post in the province receive a trophy. In addition, there will be a panel discussion and the election of Allied Youth officers for the next year.

Other speakers at the conference will include David M. Boswell, provincial director of alcohol studies; Rev. Henry Tye, Park Royal United Church; Michael Hennessey, registrar, St. Dunstan's University; A. Keith Ellsworth, New York, author, lecturer, youth worker and counsellor for alcoholics; and Rev. Arthur Pendergast, Seven Mile Bay Parish.

All four meals served during the conference will be at Montgomery Hall and will be provided for by the Division of Alcohol Studies.

entine MacIntyre, Fred Mosher, Ernest Doyle, Ralph Pigot, Douglas Coffin and John D. MacInnis. Interment was in St. Andrew's cemetery.

revolution here changed the approach to education in Canada.

The concept is now that of a democratic approach rather than an aristocratic view, he stated.

The speaker pointed out that "as the world has grown more complicated, so has knowledge needed to cope with it."

FOUR OBSTACLES

Mr. Hall felt that there were four reasons or 'obstacles' which prevent our educational system from functioning as effectively as it should. These were, authoritarianism, anthropomorphism dogmatism and traditionalism.

In dealing with the 'changing curriculum', he reported that "a study of the schools' systems in the various provinces reveals a development of several new curricula. The university preparation course is still dominant. However, in most provinces it has broadened to include optional subjects. This is the first step in curriculum change and a relatively easy one to implement.

"In most provinces," Mr. Hall said, "there are the basic core subjects of English and social studies compulsory for all. Options are selected from the maths, sciences and languages."

The broadening of the curriculum and the addition of new services have made more complex the problem of school administration, the president felt.

TEACHER TRAINING

In regard to teacher training and teacher methods, Mr. Hall stated that "as the mass of human knowledge increases, so the period of training and education of the teachers who will impart this knowledge also increase."

Referring to new teaching devices, Mr. Hall cited the introduction and use of television in classrooms, team teaching, and programmed learning.

In assessing the changes in education on the student, the speaker was of the opinion that it imposed a certain degree of pressure on young people. He also expressed the thought that the trend in automation brought a "life of relative ease."

"In many cases," Mr. Hall stated, "the students have not learned that reward comes only after hard work."

The implications of the present day changes in education to Prince Edward Island were, he felt, "first of all, that in the development and use of new approaches we are somewhat behind the rest of Canada. This results from our limited resources and the lack of research facilities. However, it may not be a bad thing, particularly if we learn from others and profit by their mistakes.

"To you teachers, in this rapidly changing society, I would say, "keep an open mind on all these recent trends in education. Don't be dogmatic. Always be ready to learn and to acquire new ideas and ways of doing things. Remember, it is only with enlightened teachers that our educational system can produce enlightened human beings," he concluded.

Speaker Discusses Problems Of Reading

Dr. Helen Murphy of the reading clinic of Boston University addressed a meeting of the Prince Edward Island Reading Council at Birchwood High School last night on the topic of "Can You Read".

Dr. Murphy, who is a charter member of the International Reading Association of which the P.E.I. council is a member, was introduced by Miss Eleanor MacDonald. She discussed questions involved in whether or not one can teach critical thinking and stressed that we read well in an area of which we have some background.

She also discussed problems involved in the reading process and spoke on the competition today from other forms of informative media such as radio and T.V.

Reading done by adults today is in three forms, she said, namely thorough or studied reading; speeded reading or scanning, and critical reading. She gave examples of each type.

Dr. Murphy then spoke on vocabulary which is common to every assignment in reading, and listed factors which are important; visual perception leading to visual memory; auditory perception leading to auditory memory; language background and intelligence.

She stated that we have to change our concept of intelligence towards acquisition of vocabulary, and went on to show that there is a difference between imagery and imagination. We have no idea how to teach imagery, so we either have it or we don't.

Dr. Murphy explained that one becomes a mature reader only when he adjusts to the reading task at hand. She gave an example and went on to say that everyone has a different purpose in reading and the only common factor in reading is vocabulary.

Dr. Murphy ended her talk saying there should be no penalty in school for ignorance unless it is attributed to lack of definite effort. She was thanked by John MacDonald.

Teachers Show Interest In Convention Displays

Attracting a great deal of interest and favorable comment at the Teachers' convention at Birchwood High School is a display of art work by pupils of city schools, grades one to seven.

Individual drawings and murals represent a variety of themes, but predominant is the historic past of the Island.

Much of the art, displayed on the east wall of the auditorium, reveals vivid color and imagination as well as a striking trend to realism.

The display is under the direction of Mrs. Doris MacKay, art supervisor for city schools.

The school library at Birchwood was the mecca for many teachers as they took advantage of every opportunity to view the extensive 'book display'.

Arranged by Mrs. Frances Lothian and Miss Mary Moran, it demonstrated, particularly, books suitable for school libraries grades three to 12.

With next week being observed as 'book week' across Canada, the display took on added significance.

The Junior Red Cross also is represented by a display arranged by Mrs. W.W. Reid, Junior Red Cross director. It announces a Centennial project, a 'Bicycle Rodeo' to be held at school rallies the first two weeks in June. It is expected that winners will meet later in a provincial competition to be held in Summerside.

The competition is designed to make bicycle riders more safety conscious in the knowledge and observing of traffic rules and regulations.

The mobile TB x-ray clinic set-up at the convention was well patronized with many teachers taking advantage of the opportunity of being x-rayed. Dr. Eric Found, medical superintendent of the Provincial Sanatorium, supervised proceedings.

Claims Liquor Regulations Will Wipe Bootlegging Out

The new liquor regulations would bring bootlegging to an end, Attorney General M.A. Farmer said in a speech to the house during the past session, and the result would be more legal purchases from the government vendors and therefore an increase in provincial revenue.

The new regulations regarding the operations of clubs and lounges under the Liquor Control Act are being prepared now for later presentation to the provincial cabinet, Blake Wood, chairman of the Liquor Control Commission said yesterday.

The new regulations will come into effect on the expiry date of previously issued licenses, May 31, 1964. They are expected to be patterned after laws studied in other provinces.

The new Act provides for more types of outlets through licenses but there will be no license issued to a club which exists just for the purpose of selling liquor.

Former Islander Dies In Calgary

Mrs. Wilfred MacKinnon, a native of P.E.I., died recently in Calgary, Alberta, in her 90th year.

She was the daughter of the late Thomas Hogan and Caroline Simpson of Hope River, and was born at Fortune Cove.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Nelson Bernard and Mrs. Herbert Biles, both of Calgary, and one brother, John Hogan, of Brookline, Mass.

MOST WENT FOREIGN

Of the 63,190 persons employed on Norwegian merchant vessels in November, 1963, 59,238 sailed on foreign routes.

Ticketing Discontinued

The Charlottetown Police Department is discontinuing the placing of parking tickets on motorists parked between the sidewalk and the street overnight. Police Chief Sterns Webster said yesterday.

The chief reminded the motoring public, however, of the necessity of removing their cars from between the sidewalk and the street in the event of a storm.

The chief added that tickets will be issued to motorists who park on unpaved areas between the street and sidewalk, because in the spring these areas become a sea of mud.
