Self Culture.

A few evenings ago Mr. Charles Murphy delivered his excellent lecture on "Self Culture" at Traveller's Rest, before a large and intelligent audience. He began by informing his audience that in preparing his lecture on this subject, his desire was to offer some encouragement to those whose early education might from any cause have been neglected. In this busy age the school years of many go slipping by so quickly that they find themselves drawn into the vortex of active life before they have acquired sufficient education to prepare them for the great battle of life. Persons so circumstanced should make the best of their opportunities and gather knowledge from every possible source. Amongst some of the means for attaining to a high degree of self culture, he mentioned reading, conversation, meditation, observation and lecture. He instanced the names of many, both in ancient and modern times, who made their mark in the world's history with no other means to aid them in their researches than those he mentioned—men who sprang from the ranks of mechanics and laborers. Socrates, who first conceived the idea of the immortality of the soul, pagan though he was, wielded the chisel and the mallet, whilst St. Paul, the great exponent of Christianity, was a tent maker in his earlier days. Many of the greatest names in literature were borne by those who never attended a college—names that have become household words—such as those of Baxter, Burns, Bunyan, Franklin, Defoe, McGee and O'Reilly. Even the immortal Shakespeare himself, who stands confessedly at the head of English literature, was, in the graphic words of Ben Johnson, a man who had "small Latin and less Greek."

Referring to Colleges and Universities, the lecturer quoted such high authorities as Lord Bacon and Basil Montague, showing that in such institutions pupils cease where invention begins. Whilst admitting the usefulness of such institutions, still the lecturer held that none of the professions could teach Copernicus in astronomy, Columbus in navigation, Shakespeare in poetry, or Locke in metaphysics, thus proving that the highest efforts of the mind in literature, science and art are necessarily the results of self-culture. Granting that some were born with greater natural abilities than others, it could not be denied that energy and perseverance were good substitutes for that vague term "genius," which Agassiz had defined as "a capacity for an extraordinary degree of application."

In reference to the study of ancient languages, he remarked that their value might be safely admitted without attaching so much importance to them as we do. It is estimated that scarcely one in every thousand who now studies Latin and Greek ever acquire a practical knowledge of them. If scholars do not succeed now as well as they formerly did in obtaining a knowledge of these languages, it is because their attempts are not sustained by practice, and it is evidently absurd to pretend to be masters in a language we do not use for the practical purposes of life.

In pointing out the fact that some were born great and that others had greatness burst upon them, he showed that such characters as these often appear in history with a consequence not really belonging to them. In such cases biography writers should detach the man from his station and reduce to a very slight notice the memorial of one whose personal qualities had no influence on his age and afford nothing to admire.

Amongst those who had achieved greatness through their own merits, he referred to some of Canada's illustrious sons who had now become fixed stars in the firmament, so to speak, and after paying those a high tribute, he referred to some distinguished characters in the neighboring Republic who have shed lustre upon their country. Amongst the latter he mentioned Abraham Lincoln and James Abram Garfield as men whose lives afford the young men of our day something to admire and imitate. As having special reference to such names and to give point to his statements, the lecturer here quoted some beautiful lines from Tennyson's "In Memoriam."

After dwelling at considerable length on reading as a means of self-culture, he went on to show the influence books have in moulding character, and for that reason would have none but the choicest and purest literature placed in the hands of the young. In showing the necessity of thorough reading he suggested, as a good plan that the reader on finishing a book should attempt to give an analysis of what he had read in it, from memory, or to write from memory the thoughts it suggested or the remarkable facts it contained.
Reading, in the way indicated, would enable us to assimilate the better the ideas of the authors deemed worthy of assimilation, thus, as it were, making them a part of ourselves. As regards careless reading, it was held to be worse than no reading at all.

Writing, as a means of self-culture, the lecturer said, does not consist in merely transferring our ideas to legible characters.
A greater benefit is found in the aid it imparts to acts of investigation. With those who do not write, truth is apt to exist in the form of principle only—of principle unexpanded and unapplied. We rarely think extensively without some effectual means of preserving our intellectual labors. He who is taught how to express himself in words, either spoken or written, will, if he practices expression, improve his thoughts thereby.
This is seen in the admitted fact of practice making perfect in composition. Teach one how to think by filling his mind with facts and laws of reasoning and logic, and teach another how to write or speak, and the latter will be and by surprise you with the better production containing undoubtedly the better thoughts. In his opinion there is too great a tendency in our educational system to devote too much time and labor to the evolving of thought, and too little to its written and vocalized expression. He thought it was due to those who bear the burden of the expense of our educational machinery that this practice should be specially corrected.

It was the opinion of the lecturer that manual labor is not incompatible with self-culture.
Such labor, if not allowed to engross our whole attention, is not a hindrance but a help to literary acquisitions, as it ensures to some extent at least that great requisite of "a sound mind in a sound body," which even the ancients deemed necessary to success. Every hour, therefore, which could be abstracted from other pursuits should be considered sacred for the purpose of self-culture. We should remember that—
"The heights by great men reached and kept Were not attained by sudden flight, But they, while their companions slept, Were toiling upwards in the night."

The perfection was an eloquent and urgent appeal to those present to apply themselves to the acquisition of knowledge with earnestness, and if obstacles present themselves we should smile them with increased vigor, and not give up our efforts in despair. Little things are always the elements, the parts of great things, and as self-culture is the grand result of small acquisitions, in learning from time to time, we may rest assured that it is not a thing of fits and impulses, but of patient and unswerving effort. It appeals to us as men, reminding us that as men we may be able to fill our positions in life; turning to insignificance all outward distinctions or rank, and that there is no assignable limit to our progress.
I regret that in a synopsis of this kind, I find myself unable to do justice to this excellent lecture, which in the opinion of many was one of the most practical of the course.

At the close of the lecture complimentary remarks were made by Messrs. Townsend, Yeo and MacIntosh, after which a vote of thanks was tendered the lecturer, to which he replied in suitable terms.

St. Patrick's and St. Joseph's at Kelly's Cross.

The feast of the great and glorious St.
Patrick was celebrated in a humble but worthy manner at Kelly's Cross. At 10 o'clock on St. Patrick's morn a High Mass was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. P. A.
McEneaney, who preached an eloquent sermon appropriate to the day. The parishioners were out en masse, many having in company, and in places on their persons "the chosen leaf of hard and cold Ireland's native shamrock." It would not be sufficient thus to let the day pass without some additional tribute to the patron saint of Irishmen; and, accordingly, St. Joseph's Church was again comfortably filled at 8 o'clock p. m.; the added tribute being in the form of a sacred concert, gotten up by the St. Joseph's choir.
The handsome sum, to be used for purchasing Church articles, was realized, and the concert was a success in every respect. The programme, consisting chiefly of instrumental and vocal selections of the principal Irish composers, occupied about two hours, and was carried out with credit to those giving part. Special credit is due to the organist, Miss M. A. Kelly, and Mr. James H.
Monaghan, who were untiring in their efforts to make the musical part a success, which it really was. Recorders were the order of the evening, and they were invariably responded to with grace. The forte of the entertainment, however, was the address of Mr. J. J.
Johnston, of Charlottetown. It was a brief but eulogistic sketch, in a general way, of the Irish question, delivered in a clear and unmistakable strain, and fraught with glowing and hopeful vistas of the future of that downtrodden land. The lecturer expressed the earnest wish that the "Grand Old Man" would yet live to procure the consummation of the greatest ambition of his life, and that the ungrateful slab over the ashes of the martyred Emmet would ere long be completed.
St. Joseph being the patron saint of this parish, the day was fittingly celebrated. High Mass was sung at 9 o'clock by Rev. J. E.
Macdonald, of Hope River. The choir was ably assisted by Father McEneaney. At the close of the Mass a beautiful sermon was preached by Rev. J. J. Macdonald, of Kinross, who spoke of the exalted position of St.
Joseph as an intercessor for his clients. The people of this parish, he said, have special claim on his guardianship, and he entreated his hearers to ask the aid of this saint, who on earth was the spouse of the Mother of God and foster-father of Jesus, and who now in Heaven will not ignore their entreaties. On St. Joseph's Day and the following hundreds of the parishioners approached communion, the pastor being assisted by the above named clergymen, also by Rev. R. B. Macdonald, of Rustico, in hearing the Easter confessions.

The McLean Case.

SHELburne, Feb 6.—The case of Mr. Mc-Lean, of Hastings Mills as published last week, is still the talk of the vicinity, and many people have taken the trouble to go to Hor-ning's Mills to see him. Mr. Belfry, the druggist here, who sold Mr. McLean the pills, vouches for the truth of the statement, as also does Mr. William Kelly, ex-M. P. for Dufferin County. Dodd's Kidney Pills are indeed a wonderful remedy, as they cure the most deadly as well as the most prevalent disease that affects humanity, namely, Bright's Disease, as well as all forms of kidney troubles, dropsy, diabetes, stone in bladder, and most especially rheumatism.

other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

IMPORTANT NEWS.

Something the People of Canada will Appreciate.

A Word from Halifax in the Right Direction.

Annapolis Speaks, with no Uncertain Sound.

The late Hon. W. F. DesBarres was for more than 23 years, a Judge of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, and the name of DesBarres is held in the highest estimation by the people of the Maritime Provinces. Samuel W., son of Hon. W.
F. DesBarres, is Registrar of the Admiralty District of Nova Scotia, having held the office for 23 years. In conversation with our Representative, a short time since, he made the following statement:
"I have used SKODA'S DISCOVERY and SKODA'S LITTLE TABLETS, for a few weeks, with the most gratifying results, and of the opinion that they are of a high medicinal quality. I have no hesitation in endorsing the Skoda line of medicines, and recommending them to the people of the Dominion, as articles of superior merit, and well worthy their confidence. I fully believe these Remedies to be all their proprietors claim for them."

"The people of Nova Scotia are justly proud of their institutions of learning, and their educators rank among the best in the country. At the head of many of the Universities in the U. S., are placed men, who hail from the Dominion, and whose methods of teaching and discipline are regarded by the American people, as the finest in the world. For 15 years Mr.
S. G. Shaffer has been one of the leading educators in the Province of Nova Scotia.
At present he is Principal of the Public Schools in Annapolis. In speaking of SKODA'S REMEDIES he says:
"Having used SKODA'S DISCOVERY and SKODA'S LITTLE TABLETS, I have formed a very favorable opinion of these remedies. For Diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Kidneys, I have found them to be most excellent. I am so thoroughly convinced of their curative properties, that I shall take the full course of these Remedies, as recommended by the Company."
