Incinerator Proposed On New Site For Dump

By RALPH CAMERON
Guardian - Patriot Staff Writer

Fast action is expected now in connection with solution to the perennial problem of the city dump, always a nuisance and frequently a source of disgust.

The flat statement of the provincial government that it was not their baby, and they did not intend to bounce it, means that the city will be forced to move, in more senses than one.

However, the fact the city has reached the end of the line so far as use of the present site is concerned, also has definite advantages. Undoubtedly, the provincial authorities will also move in the direction of making this a real beauty spot instead of a eyesore.

It can be done, and the very location, fronting on the Hillsboro River and practically forming an entrance to Riverside Hospital grounds, lends itself easily to beautification.

But the prospect also lends itself to speculation as to what use may be made of the area, and some of the vague rumors and half-truths, current, offer interesting speculative areas.

LIQUOR STORE SITE?
Perhaps the most interesting rumor to date concerns the possibility of the government building the controversial new liquor store there, after the area is completely filled and graded and a new culvert installed.

The thought is intriguing in its implications. Definitely, the move would satisfy all those who wish the new store far removed from schools and churches. And since this is purely a provincial government matter, there is nothing to prevent the store from being built outside the city limits.

But the problem of where to put the new dump, and what form it should take, remains even more in the realm of pure speculation.

Undoubtedly the perfect answer would be for the city to acquire by purchase the property known as the MacKay pit in Norborn, from which the government took so much of the fill for the newly opened Hillsboro Bridge.

COULD BE ENCLOSED
It is believed this pit would lend itself easily to the purpose, in that it could be enclosed to enable the city to have only one access road to it. This would mean gates could be installed, thus preventing all future unauthorized dumping at night.

More important, especially from the point of view of any nearby residents, would be the distinct possibility of the city finally establishing an incinerator on the new site.

There is little point at this late date, and in view of the rapid development of the metropolitan theme, of going further with the antiquated and unsanitary open dumping of the past.

It is believed the cost of an incinerator would be relatively insignificant when compared with the immense benefits accruing. These latter would include the happiness of residents in the general area, through ending the odor from burning refuse, a cleaner section in general, and an end to the problem of vermin.

NOT PROHIBITIVE
As to the cost, itself, it would not be prohibitive when amortized, say over a 20-year period. Handed in this manner, it is believed the annual cost to the City of Charlottetown would be in the neighborhood of $9,000.

If this should be coupled to garbage collection by the city on a compulsory basis — and the service would not necessarily cost residents any more than they are now paying privately and even willingly — it is possible the cost-to-city revenues would be even lower.

However, aside from any consideration of costs, there would be satisfaction practically guaranteed to all citizens. Finally, the problem of the dump would be solved; there would be no further worries regarding changing locations and the terrible odor continually hovering over, and all too often extending widely from the present site, would be eliminated.

ONLY REAL PROBLEM
The only real problem and difficulty offered may come from the attitude of the provincial government. It is believed members still feel the pit can be useful in providing for future needs in the matter of obtaining adequate fill.

But it might be reasonably answered that a site to obtain fill can be found almost anywhere the government wishes to look for one.

The same cannot be said of possible and suitable sites for a new city dump.

Canadian Brass Co. Branch Observes 40th Anniversary

By FORBES RHUDE

Anaconda American Brass Ltd., New Toronto, is celebrating its 40th anniversary.

The company, which started business with 300 employees in 1922, now has 1,300. Eighteen employees are still on the job, including J. S. Vanderploeg, president since 1955.

The current issue (January-February) of the company's publication, Anaconda Speaks, includes an illustrated history of its operations.

Simultaneously, the American parent, Anaconda American Brass Company of Waterbury, Conn., is celebrating its 150th anniversary.

The World Bank announces a loan equivalent to $2,000,000 to Iceland to help finance extension of the system that supplies hot water for commercial and domestic heating in Reykjavik, the capital. The water comes from nearby natural hot springs.

Total construction costs of the new project will be about $5,600,000. All major purchases of equipment, material and services will be based on international competitive bidding.

International Development Association, World Bank affiliate, has extended a development credit equivalent to $18,500,000 to India for expansion of electric power in the Damodar Valley, northwest of Calcutta. Total cost of the project is estimated at the equivalent of $36,500,000.

The Cotton Institute of Canada reports that activity in Canadian cotton textile mills remains at a relatively high level in January. Mills opened 54,694 bales of raw cotton of 500 pounds each, compared with 31,106 bales in December and 29,905 bales in January last year.

Wood, Gundy and Co. Ltd., in a review of Algoma Steel Corporation Ltd., comments that "investment in the common shares provides participation in the growth of one of the leading companies engaged in the important Canadian steel industry."

Gairdner and Co. Ltd., has issued a 21-page booklet on Jefferson Lake Petrochemicals of Canada Ltd., sulphur producer in Western Canada, and on the world sulphur picture. The study sees an encouraging future for Canadian sulphur and recommends Jefferson Lake shares.

Ross Knowles and Co. Ltd., in a review of Molson Breweries recommends the company's shares "as a conservative investment medium," adding that "although the immediate return is not high, a gradual increase in dividends is a reasonable expectation over a period of time."

PCs Elect In 4th Kings

MONTAGUE — George White-way, Dover, was elected president of the Fourth Kings District Progressive Conservative Association at the annual meeting held at Murray River Friday night.

Other officers elected were M. N. McGowan, Kilmuir, vice-president; Leslie Stuart, Whim Road, secretary; Norman MacLean, Murray River, provincial representative; John K. MacDonald, Kilmuir, county representative.

Mrs. Margaret Macdonald, MP, was present and addressed the meeting briefly, and thanked all for their continued support. Others present on the platform were Major Douglas McGowan, MLA, Ewart Keeping and C.A. Shaw.

One of the resolutions passed was that the provincial government be asked to take over hospital insurance premiums.

Fire Quelled At Souris

SOURIS — Firemen were called Sunday night for a minor fire at the White Rose service station on Main Street here. The outbreak was extinguished quickly by the Souris fire department, using chemicals.

The blaze was noticed about 10:30 by a passerby, James MacDonald, of Souris.

The fire was believed to have originated around an electric welder. The station had not been open Sunday. Alban Gallant is the proprietor.

Only Main Street was open for motor traffic when the alarm was turned in. The others were closed by drifts up to four feet deep, it was reported. Plovs had cleared streets earlier, but a heavy drift closed them again.

Former Justice
Opposes Pictures
In Courtroom

QUEBEC (CP)—Dr. Ivan C. Rand, former justice of the Supreme Court of Canada, said Saturday he opposes press photography in a courtroom.

The 77-year-old dean of law at the University of Western Ontario told delegates to the Canadian Managing Editors Conference that courtroom photography can result in distortion or exaggeration of an important case.

Dr. Rand said he was referring to remarks made earlier in "an excellent address . . . the address of an advocate," by Joseph Costa, chief photographer of New York's Sunday Mirror Magazine.

Mr. Costa described efforts and successes of American photographers in covering court cases and urged newspapers to unite behind these efforts.

The New York photographer said he has talked to judges who opposed courtroom photography and they usually gave an emotional rather than analytical argument against it.

Dr. Rand said newspapers have an astonishing impact. Allowing photography during a tense courtroom situation might upset the defendant to the point where his case would be damaged.

The New Brunswick-born Dean urged editors to publish significant facts that would give a clear and unemotional picture of events.

Party President Shows Surprise
OTTAWA (CP)—Michael Oliver, national president of the New Democratic Party, made the following statement Sunday night after bearing of the resignation of Hazen Argue, NDP House leader, from the party:

"I have learned of Mr. Argue's inexplicable decision to resign from the NDP with great surprise. Nothing in his recent relations with the party gave any indication of such an intention. Only yesterday he was discussing plans for an NDP radio broadcast with our federal leader, Mr. T. C. Douglas.

It is hard to reconcile Mr. Argue's action with the speech he made at the founding convention promising his loyal support to the party and to Mr. Douglas.

HAZEN ARGUE

months, even before the NDP leadership convention in August when Mr. Douglas defeated him. "NOT HAPPY"

He said: "I have generally not been happy at all with the role farmers have been able to play in the NDP."

"The NDP, since inception, has been to all intents and purposes controlled by labor leaders and to a large extent financed by large donations from selected trade-union sources."

Mr. Argue is the second major CCF member to bolt party ranks in recent years. In 1955, his Parliamentary desk mate Ross Thatcher became an independent and a year later joined the Liberal party.

Mr. Argue was elected national leader of the CCF party in 1960, succeeding M. J. Coldwell.

"The action I take today I feel is not one of leaving the CCF because the CCF as we have known it has now ceased to exist. The CCF has passed into history. The course I followed today is in a real measure out of respect for the CCF. The ideal that was the CCF, integrity, honesty, justice, impelled me to take this eventual step."

'Good Thing For Party'
Leo P. MacIsaac Says

The resignation of Hazen Argue from the New Democratic Party was not unexpected, Leo P. MacIsaac said here last night.

Representing the Maritime area on the national executive, Mr. MacIsaac thinks "it is a good thing for the party to be rid of the small extremist group represented by men of Mr. Argue's thinking."

A national vice president, Mr. Argue's action with the speech he made at the founding convention promising his loyal support to the party and to Mr. Douglas.

Mr. MacIsaac added, "It is a clear indication that control of the party is firmly in the hands of the clear thinking new group in Canada's newest political party."

The text of Mr. MacIsaac's statement is as follows: "The resignation was not unexpected as Mr. Argue has not been co-operating at all in the development of the party, since he was beaten by T. C. Douglas in the race for leadership at the national founding convention last summer.

"Personally I think it is a good thing for the party because it is a clear indication that the control is in the hands of the moderate, liberally minded new group within the party under the leadership of Mr. Douglas. "Mr. Argue, in my opinion, represents a small group of the indecisive, extremist and neutralist people from the old CCF party. If they had given up and resigned, I think it is a good thing."

Mr. MacIsaac emphasized that he does not include all of the old CCF group in his reference. "It was only to a small portion of which Mr. Argue is an outstanding example, he added.
