Trench Silo

It is estimated that it cut down grain consumption for the 60 odd head of Holsteins at the farm by about 25%.

The grass can be put into the silo shortly after it has been cut and should be put in the same day, stated Mr. Baker. At Falconwood it is raked into windrows with a straight rake.

About a foot or so of silage is put into the silo on the first day and then left for about two days to heat. The silage is then piled into the pit until it comes up a little higher than the level of the ground.

In the event that a man wants to put two cuttings of grass into a silo, Mr. Baker stated that he should divide his silo into sections and make sure each section is filled to the top before he starts the next one. In doing this he make save considerable ensilage from spoiling, stated Mr. Baker.

Last year at the Falconwood silo about two gallons of molasses to the ton of ensilage was used. This year molasses will be used with most of the ensilage but it is planned to experiment with a small section by not using molasses.

During the time that the ensilage is being put into the trench a tractor is used constantly to keep the grass well packed and level. Mr. Baker believes that a team of horses might accomplish the same results.

When filled the silo is covered with a layer of straw on top of which is placed four or five inches of clay. Some farmers use sawdust and ground lime instead of clay.

The silo at St. Vincent's Orphanage is 40 feet long, 12 feet wide and five feet deep. A demonstration will be given at Falconwood Farm this afternoon.

Mr. McMurry, under whose direction the silos are being made, is a graduate in Agricultural Engineering from McGill University. Before coming here he was employed with the Nova Scotia Department of Agriculture. He is a war veteran, having seen four years service in the Navy.

Mr. MacLure.

(Britain today asked the International Court at The Hague to suspend "contemptuous" measures of restraint against Anglo-Iranian pending the court's decision on the oil disputes.)

(The court has already agreed to consider Britain's protest against the nationalization measure. Britain contends it violates her oil agreement with Iran. Britain's efforts to negotiate a settlement with Iran collapsed at the first meeting in Tehran.)

Lt. Col. Storey noted that the key note of the Premier's success had been hard work. He stated that the Junior Chamber of Commerce was the training ground for the Board of Trade members and he stressed the need of a liaison officer between the two organizations.

Campbell-Sullivan Wedding

All Saints Church, Cardigan, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on June 26th at 8:30 A.M. when Rev. H. J. Croken united in marriage Sadie Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Sullivan, Cardigan, and Michael Joseph, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis Campbell, Mitchell River.

The church of the altar was decorated with roses and ferns and made a beautiful setting for the wedding.

The girls' choir of All Saints Church, rendered appropriate hymns during the ceremony. Mrs. Earle MacDonald was organist.

The bride entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus, on the arm of her brother, Mr. William Sullivan, by whom she was given in marriage. She was a picture of youth and loveliness in her floor-length gown of traditional white satin, featuring a high neckline with lace inserts at the shoulders, long sleeves and a bouffant skirt ending in a short train. Her shoulder-length veil was held in place with seeded pearls. She carried a beautiful bouquet of white roses.

The bride's only attendant was Miss Marie Sullivan, who was gowned in Nile green taffeta, featuring a low neckline and short sleeves; her headpiece was a wreath of flowers. She wore Nile green mitts, and carried a bouquet of red roses.

Mr. Joseph MacAuley was best man.

Following the ceremony a breakfast for the immediate relatives was held at the home of the bride. The young couple will reside in Moncton following their honeymoon.—M.

terained by the wives of the members of the local Chamber. protect British nationals in Iran. The debate was opened by deputy Conservative leader Anthony Eden, who said British evacuation of the oil fields would be "abject surrender to the threat of force."

Eden asserted Iran would collapse if its revenue from oil ceased, and the Tudeh (Communist) Party was waiting to take over control.

TEHRAN, Iran, June 21 — (AP) — Nationalist youths battered down Anglo-Iranian Oil Company signs today and Iranian deputies gave Premier Mohammed Mossadegh a unanimous vote of confidence to strengthen his hand in taking over the company's operations.

The shutdown probably will come in the next few days at Abadan, the refinery centre.
