ADAM BEDE.

CHAPTER VIII.

Dinah had let her work fall during this narrative, which she uttered in her usual simple way, but with that sincere, articulate, thrilling treble by which she always mastered her audience. She stooped now to gather up her sewing, and then went on with it as before. Mr. Irwine was deeply interested. He said to himself, 'He must be a miserable prig who would act the pedagogue here; one might as well go and lecture the trees for growing in their own shape.'

'And you never feel any embarrassment from the sense of your youth—that you are a lovely young woman on whom men's eyes are fixed?' he said aloud.

'No, I've no room for such feelings, and I don't believe the people ever take notice about that. I think, sir, when God makes his presence felt through us, we are like the burning bush. Moses never took any heed what sort of bush it was—he only saw the brightness of the Lord. I've preached to as rough ignorant people as can be in the villages about Snowfield—men that look very hard and wild; but they never said an unkind word to me, and often thanked me kindly as they made way for me to pass through the midst of them.'

'That I can believe—that I can well believe,' said Mr. Irwine, emphatically. 'And what did you think of your hearers last night, now? Did you find them quiet and attentive?'

'Very quiet, sir; but I saw no signs of any great work upon them, except in a young girl named Bessy Cranage, toward whom my heart yearned greatly, when my eyes first fell on her blooming youth given up to folly and vanity. I had some private talk and prayer with her afterwards, and I trust her heart is touched. But I've noticed that in those villages where the people lead a quiet life among the green pastures and the still waters, tilling the ground and tending the cattle, there's a strange deadness to the Word, as different as can be from the great towns, like Leeds, where I once went to visit a holy woman who preaches there. It's wonderful how rich is the harvest of souls up to these high-walled streets, where you seem to walk as in a prison yard, and the car is deafened with the sound of woolly toil. I think maybe, it is because the promise is sweeter when this life is so dark and weary, and the soul gets more hungry when the body is ill at ease.'

'Why, yes, our farm-laborers are not easily roused. They take life almost as slowly as the sheep and cows. But we have some intelligent workmen about here. I dare say you know the Bedes; Seth Bede, by-the-by, is a Methodist.'

'Yes, I know Seth well, and his brother Adam a little. Seth is a gracious young man—sincere and without offence; and Adam is like the patriarch Joseph; for his great skill and knowledge, and the kindness he shows to his brother and his parents.'

'Perhaps you don't know the trouble that has just happened to them! Their father, Matthias Bede, was drowned in the Willow Brooke last night, not far from his own door. I'm going now to see Adam.'

'Ah! their poor aged mother!' said Dinah, dropping her hands and looking before her with pitying eyes, as if she saw the object of her sympathy. 'She will mourn heavily; for Seth has told me she's of an anxious, troubled heart. I must go and see if I can give her any help.'

As she rose and was beginning to fold up her work, Captain Donithorne, having exhausted all plausible pretences for remaining among the milkpans, came out of the dairy, followed by Mrs. Poyser. Mr. Irwine, now rose also, and advancing toward Dinah, held out his hand and said, 'Good-bye. I hear you are going away soon; but this will not be the last visit you will pay your aunt—so we shall meet again, I hope.'

His cordiality toward Dinah set all Mrs. Poyser's anxieties at rest, and her face was brighter than usual, as she said, 'I've never asked after Mrs. Irwine and the Miss Irwines, sir; I hope they are as well as usual.'

'Yes, thank you Mrs. Poyser, except that Miss Anne has one of her bad headaches to-day. By-the-by, we all liked that nice cream cheese you sent us—my mother especially.'

'I am very glad indeed, sir. It is but seldom I make one, but I remember Mrs. Irwine was fond of 'em. Please to give my duty to her, and to Miss Kate and Miss Anne. They've never been to look at my poultry this long while, and I've got some beautiful speckled chickens, black and white, as Miss Kate might like to have some among hers.'

'Well, I'll tell her; she must come and see them. Good-bye,' said the Rector, mounting his horse.

'Just ride slowly on, Irwine,' said Captain Donithorne, mounting also. 'I'll overtake you in three minutes. I'm only going to speak to the shepherd about the whelps. Good-bye, Mrs. Poyser; tell your husband I shall come and have a long talk with him soon.'

noticed the bonnet, deferred remarking on it until she had disburdened herself of her surprise at Mr. Irwine's behavior.

'Why, Mr. Irwine wasn't angry, then? What did he say to you, Dinah? Didn't he scold you for preaching?'

'No, he was not at all angry. He was very friendly to me. I was quite drawn out to him; I hardly know how, for I had always thought of him as a worldly Sadducee. But his countenance is as pleasant as the morning sunshine.'
