

Computer-Aided Instruction at UPEI

A workshop entitled "Alternatives to Live Teachers and Guinea Pigs: Microcomputers as Educators and Lab Animals" will be hosted by the Department of Anatomy and Physiology of the Atlantic Veterinary College and the UPEI Computer Center under the sponsorship of the APICS Lab Animal Care Committee this weekend (Nov. 11, 12 & 13). The workshop will focus on the use of computers in the teaching laboratory and on computer-aided instruction in general. On Friday evening at 7:30 in Lecture Rm A of the AVC there will be a public lecture and discussion on "Alternatives to Using Animals in Teaching and Research" presented by Dr. James Amend who is the Chair of the Department of Anatomy and Physiology. Dr. Amend is a leading proponent for seeking alternatives to the use of animals in the laboratories of AVC. Throughout the day on Saturday Nov. 12 workshop registrants will participate in sessions on microcomputer use, computer-aided instruction, interactive video disk technology, software authoring, and software demonstrations. They will also have the opportunity to try out some of the teaching software for themselves. All of the sessions will show how the computer can be used as an alternative to live animals in the teaching laboratory. The microcomputer lab will be made available on Sunday morning for further informal "hands-on" sessions. Sessions on Saturday start at 8:30 a.m. while on Sunday the microcomputer lab will be open from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30. People are coming from across Atlantic Canada to attend the workshop. Local participation is especially encouraged and to that end registration for UPEI staff and faculty is only $10 while that for students is a bargain at $5. Registration for off campus people is $25. No registration is required for the public lecture on Friday evening. Enquiries may be made to Dr. Cathy Schaap in the Department of Anatomy and Physiology (566-0809). Interested persons are encouraged to attend.

●●● Assault

What can I do?

Recognize that our society has a responsibility to stop all forms of sexual assault. Sexual assault is a crime.

An important first step is to learn more about sexual assault and why it happens. Many of the things we have heard about sexual assault are not true. We need to think about our attitudes and challenge the myths. We must place responsibility for the crimes on the offenders and stop blaming victims. Talk to others about sexual assault. You can help men and women learn that women have the right to say no—and that no means no—whatever the situation. No one has the right to pressure or force any unwanted act of a sexual nature on another person.

TAKE THE TIME TO REPORT ANY SITUATION THAT AROUSES YOUR SUSPICIONS TO THE POLICE AND BE WILLING TO TESTIFY.

You may know a woman who has been sexually assaulted. Listen to her. Let her know that it was not her fault and that she is not alone. Find out what help is available in your community and tell her.

What can I do if I've been Sexually Assaulted?

All women suffer pain and trauma from a sexual assault, even many years later. They may show this in different ways, or not show it at all. It helps to talk about it:

You might choose to tell someone you trust, such as a close friend or relative, or contact:

- *a rape crisis centre or sexual assault centre
- *a women's counselling service
- *a hospital sexual assault care coordinator
- *a teacher or guidance counselor
- *a health worker or you doctor.

In order for a criminal investigation to take place, you must tell the police that you have been sexually assaulted. A medical examination may be necessary—if so, it should be done as soon as possible after the assault.

Sometimes the people you turn to will not understand. There are others who do.

Remember—you are not alone and you are not to blame.

Ins and Outs on Campus

This column on the ins and outs is purely arbitrary, please feel free to send us your views on what's hot or not.

What's hot

- Finally getting our 1987 yearbook!
- The Student Union for bringing in the big event with all Island Candidates to speak.
- Swimming Wednesday nights for UPEI students at the Kirkwood "Swim and Suds"
- Corky and Juice Pigs for making J. Comeau blush to pieces!
- Getting to express our view on free trade by ballot Nov. 21.

What's not

- Le Club Politque for bringing in John Crosbie to speak about what little he knows about the Free Trade deal.
- A Hallowe'en House party at Marian Hall.
- The Student Union lack of information mini-centre
- Tripping over tools, paint, and wood supplies laying around Main Building.
- Defacing Candidates posters even if the message is popular
