

French Language Only Is Urged For Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — A separatist movement has placed before Quebec's royal commission on education a program for making Quebec completely French.

L'Alliance Laurentienne recommended that French be made the only official language of the province, that it be the only language taught in primary schools and that all texts be in French.

Francis Lortie, chairman of the education committee of the movement, described the steps as "measures of national urgency."

The alliance said it supports the existing confessional school system and free education. It asked that school attendance now compulsory to the age of 15 be made compulsory to the age of 17 in the city and 16 in the country.

QUESTION, SUGGESTION
Commission member profesor Guy Rocher asked Mr. Lortie, "when you say all children in Quebec should be taught French from grade one on, do you mean all French children?" "All Quebec children," Mr. Lortie said.

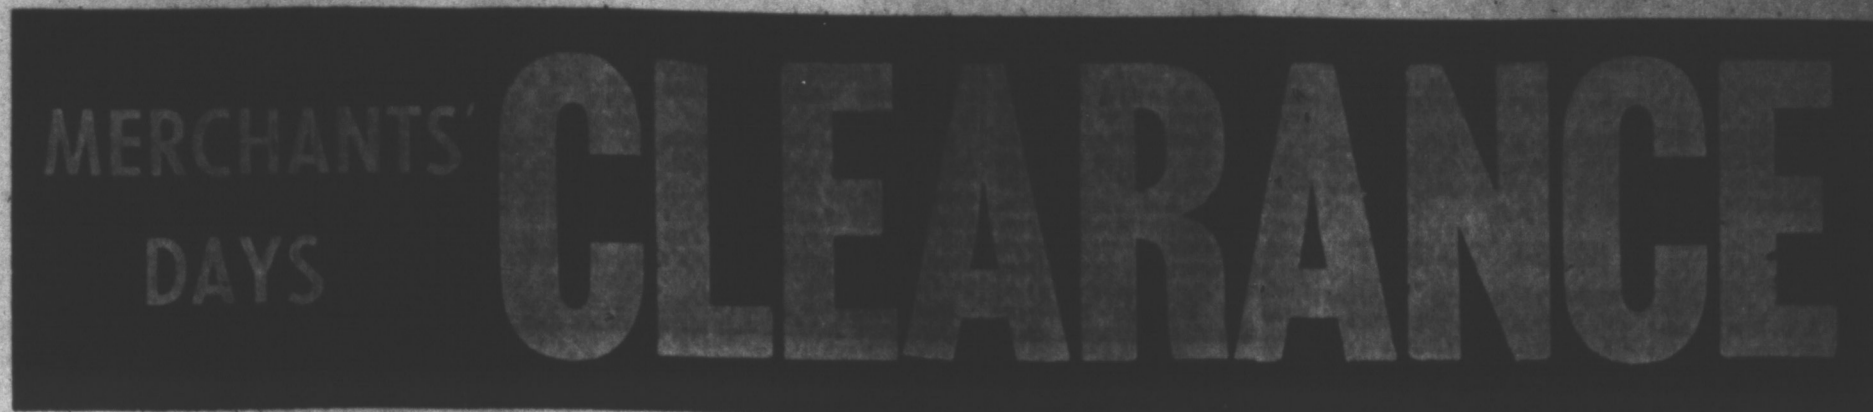

Another commissioner, professor David Munroe, asked if the alliance was advocating that the English-speaking minority be assimilated into Quebec's predominantly French milieu.

"It is not a matter of assimilation," Mr. Lortie said, "but of bringing them into meaningful contact with the French milieu. Too often English pupils study French with no interest and are unable to speak it when they leave school."
