MacDougall-MacKinnon Wedding

A very pretty Fall wedding was solemnized on Thursday, Oct. 25th at 7 p.m. when Rev. J.D. Davison united in bonds of holy matrimony, Miss Ruby Lavina MacKinnon, youngest daughter of Mrs. Mabel MacKinnon and the late Russell MacKinnon, Charlottetown, and Ivan Christopher MacDougall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan MacDougall, Charlottetown.
The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride which was very attractively decorated with white streamers and bells. The marriage ceremony was performed under an arch of autumn leaves.
The bride was given in marriage by her brother Mr. Allison Keith MacKinnon.
The bride looked very charming in a ballerina length dress of turquoise blue velvet. She wore a small cap of turquoise nylon net. Her corsage was of gold roses and her ornaments were a rhinestone set, gift of the groom.
The matron of honour was Mrs. Victor Robertson. She was very pretty in a ballerina length dress of shell pink taffeta and lace. She wore a coronet of seed pearls and corsage of yellow roses. The groomsmen were Mr. Lewis MacFadyen.
After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served to eighty guests.
The bride's mother chose for her daughter's wedding a navy blue crepe dress with matching accessories. She wore a corsage of pink carnations. The groom's mother wore a dress of black crepe with matching accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.
The happy young couple left on a honeymoon trip to points of interest in the Maritimes. On their return they will reside in Charlottetown. For travelling the bride wore a powder blue suit, navy accessories and white shortie coat. Her corsage was of yellow roses.
Mr. and Mrs. MacDougall were recipients of many beautiful gifts. The Guardian joins with the young couple's many friends in wishing them a long and happy wedded life.

EVIL SPIRITS
The Jinn or Djinn, a class of spirits in Arabian mythology, are believed to have been superstitions long before Solomon's time.

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur
The preacher came along and wrote upon Life's signboard, "I pray for all."
The lawyer wrote underneath, "I plead for all."
The politician came next and wrote, "I work for all."
The doctor added, "I prescribe for all."
Mr. John Citizen wrote, "I pay for all."

In a wild profusion of bays and inlets, the historic Percy Sound region of Ontario boasts 30,000 tiny islands.
The popular games we play today are but elaborate survivals of the early playdays of humanity.
Boxing, wrestling, putting the weight, boat and chariot racing, were all known to the ancient Greeks. The Olympic games started in the year 776 B. C.
The Romans, too, were very fond of all kinds of sports and their taste for games grew till it became a passion, and under the Empire games were looked upon by the mob as one of the two necessities of life.

And that's just how modern folk view the sports picture. Taking them by and large, they honor the skilled player more than they go the philosopher.
Basketball was invented in 1891 by James Naismith, an instructor in the gymnasium of the Young Men's Christian Association training school at Springfield, Mass., and is one of the few sports of modern vintage.
One would think that billiards was a modern game but we read in Cotton's "Complete Gamesetter," an old work published in 1674, that people amused themselves at billiards as early as 400 B. C. Englishmen played billiards at an early date. Shakespeare has Cleopatra say, in the absence of Anthony:

"Let us to billiards: Come Charmsman." "Anthony and Cleopatra," Act II, scene 5.
The game of golf is so old that nobody seems to know where or when it originated. Some think it was first played in Holland, others say it originated in Scotland. The name itself is spelled several ways, namely: Goff, goffee, gouffe, gooff, goulf and grouff.
Rink hockey as played today is a development of a game known in the Old Country for centuries under the names "hurley and shinty and bandy."

Polo was popular with the Chinese 600 A. D. In those days it was played with a light wooden ball. Every class indulged itself in this sport, and at night the grounds were lighted with candles so that the game could go on without interruption.
Tennis, chess, marbles, dominoes, playing cards, and what have you, were all played centuries ago, by peoples living in widely separated countries.

It may be interesting to note that the first playing cards were printed on vellum. In the 15th century cards were manufactured from wood which enabled the poorer classes to indulge in card games for the first time.
The earliest German playing cards bore in their suits, hearts, bells, leaves, and acorns. This was followed with swords, cups, money, and batons. Not until the 18th century did the hearts, spades, clubs, etc., appear on cards. Tracing the history of card backs to their origin one is led to believe that the symbol language of cards suggests a military origin. But like many other games playing cards are of obscure origin, and there are many nations credited with being their birthplace.
It was not till the 18th century, however, that card games were played to any extent in the New World.

Ticking the soles of a prisoner was a form of torture practiced by the early Chinese — hence our popular expression "ticked to death."
The prisoner reclined on the ground, his feet in stocks, while his tormentor squatted on the ground and tickled the soles of his feet with a long feather or straw.

How did the word "lynching" originate? During the Revolutionary War an American planter by the name of Lynch illegally put to death some Tories. Thereafter, whenever anyone was hanging without benefit of the law, the event was referred to as a "lynching."

The phrase "bury the hatchet" obviously derives from the actual ceremony of burying the hatchet, practiced by the Indians to show their willingness to be at peace. We still use the phrase "bury the hatchet" when we wish to forget and forgive some quarrel or fancied wrong.

Back in the days when St. Austin lived, the familiar phrase "When in Rome, do as the Romans do" was a very common expression. In modern lingo we use the term to indicate adapting oneself to one's environment.
"A thorn in my side," "Kick the bucket," "Baker's dozen," and "Nothing new under the sun" are popular phrases that can be traced to early usage.

"Crocodile's tears" stems from an old tradition that crocodiles moan and sigh like a person in distress when they wish to attract travelers to the spot. It is said that these animals actually shed tears while in the very act of eating their prey.

From Aesop's fables we get a wealth of sayings still in daily use. To name but a few:
"Look before you leap." Figures are not always facts. "Wise men say nothing in dangerous times." "Honesty is the best policy." "Pride shall have a fall." "The lights of Heaven are never blown out." "Union is strength." "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush." Which reminds us that

Korean Veteran Visiting Birthplace

A much-decorated American soldier, M/Sgt. Edward A. Murphy, of Haverhill, Mass., is at present visiting his aunt, Mrs. Michael Murphy, New Haven, M/Sgt. Murphy was born in New Haven 32 years ago and left to go to the United States when he was four years old.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Murphy of Haverhill, he has twice been awarded the Bronze Star for heroism. The first time was in Germany in World War II, in March 1945, when he was still a corporal. He volunteered to go to the aid of a wounded man on an improved stretcher across ground constantly under fire, according to the citation awarded him. His heroic action saved the life of the wounded man.

On the Korean battlefield on August 12, 1950, M/Sgt. Murphy and two other machine gunners refused to give up their positions with complete disregard for their own safety when the enemy in superior numbers overran the forward position.

"When the machine gun ammunition was exhausted," the citation said, "Sgt. Murphy and his two companions fired their individual sidearms, continuing to inflict heavy losses on the enemy until the enemy was forced to withdraw. The citation said the Haverhill soldier's action reflected great credit upon himself and the military service.

M/Sgt. Murphy was later flown to Japan from Korea, suffering from battle fatigue, after 90 days at the front without relief. He returned to Korea after being released from the hospital. The past summer he was assigned to the guard of honour for the United Nations advance peace camp in Munsan.

M/Sgt. Murphy is accompanied by his aunt, Mrs. Clara Painchaud and his fiancée, Miss Kay Foley, both of Haverhill, Mass.

During World War II, four other brothers in the Murphy family were in the service, and today a fifth one is with the paratroops in Germany.
