Business Spotlight

By Forbes Rhude
Canadian Press Business Editor

The present scarcity of wool in the world, and consequent high prices, is having its effect on the thinking of Canadian farmers.

Wool News, published by Canadian Co-Operative Wool Growers, Ltd., commenting on this, says in part:

More signs of genuine interest in sheep raising in Canada have been apparent in recent months than at any time in many decades.

From scores of centres come reports that it is impossible to meet the demand for breeding ewes. Areas which in former years could be depended on as sources of supply for at least enough to establish a few new flocks now say there are none available because they are needed in the district.

Right now the problem is to decide on what can be done to assure increased sheep population in the fewest possible years.

Not much more can be done as far as 1951 is concerned, but the more ewe lambs that are salvaged the better it will be for 1952. This same practice from year to year is about the only hope for succeeding years. Those who plan to establish new flocks will have to be on the alert, but patient.

Not many years ago the Western Provinces could be counted upon to supply at least a few thousand ewes that were past their best for range conditions but good for one or more years when transferred to the less-rigid environment of the east. This year it was difficult to get more than a few hundred. Even with some ranches disposing of large flocks the common answer was that they would be placed locally.

Flock owners on Ontario's Manitoulin Island last year were inclined to go out of sheep because of the ravages made by wolves. This year they are holding practically everything in order to replenish island flocks. In the several districts in Northern Ontario in which organization has proven progressively helpful both in production and marketing during the last decade or more, there is no talk of flock dispersal or reduction.

Bank Statement

MONTREAL, Nov. 26 — (CP)— The Bank of Montreal in its financial statement for the year ended last Oct. 31 today reported net profit of $5,942,897, compared with $5,816,569 for the 1949 fiscal year.

Profits before taxes, after provision for contingencies and depreciation of bank premises, were $9,536,000 against $9,221,000 the previous year.

Quarterly dividends of 25 cents a share brought total payments to shareholders during the year to $3,600,000 or $1 a share.

A balance of $2,342,897 was carried forward and, added to the balance in profit and loss at the end of 1949, brought this account to $3,498,708.

Bank of Montreal On Increased Production

Montreal, Nov. 24 — Against the present world background, controls can at best play only a secondary part in the defence programs of the United States and Canada, the Bank of Montreal comments in its latest monthly Business Review. The primary emphasis must be "on increased productivity and on fiscal and mometary policies".

The B of M, reporting on "the pattern of economic readjustment to the needs of the expanding defence program" observes that the interest of Canadian Business in government actions to divert manpower and materials from civilian to military uses and to ease shortages and rising prices is not confined to domestic affairs.

"So closely integrated are the economies of Canada and the United States, and so dependent are many of their industries on common sources of basic materials, that the problems which will arise, the measures which will be adopted and the concern of business enterprise with both, will tend inevitably to be continental rather than national in scope."

Washington Agreement

Stressing the "paramount long-range importance" of the Washington Agreement of October 26, for economic cooperation between the United States and this country, the B of M notes that the pact refers only to cordination of controls over the distribution of scarce items Neither nation is committed to "a meticulous matching" of technique in this regard.

"Implicit in this is the recognition that in Canada, with its relatively small population and high degree of industrial integration, a great deal may be accomplished by informal arrangements which in a much larger and more complex economy could be achieved only through formal restrictions."

The bank finds that emergency measures effected by Canada and the U. S., apart from the Agreement, exemplify similarities of underlying principle, as well as differences of scope and techniques. Both nations have taken steps to tighten export controls, curb the vigorous upward trend of residential building and restrict consumer credit.

Governments Cautious

"In summary, it is apparent that in both countries the tendency thus far has been to make cautious and piecemeal use of restrictive devices rather than to rush headlong into an all-embacing system of control of production, prices and wages of the nature employed in World War II.

"And while the pattern is still evolving, it is presumably recognized that there are fundamental differences between measures essential and effective in an all-out war effort and those appropriate to a situation which may involve a high level of military preparedness for many years.

"Against the present background, controls can, at best, be of only secondary significance. The primary emphasis must be on increased productivity and on fiscal and monetary policies which will check inflationary pressures at their source."
