With All My Love Continued from page 3 something else. It seemed screwy at the time, but the reason given was that Old Man Billet had decided at the last minute that he wanted two planes on hand when the government came, so Hanley was put on the job of getting the substitute in shape: the one Roger took up was supposed to be perfect, despite the last few changes. So Roger went up and in a power dive both wings collapsed. "The substitute plane was used on the government tests, and didn't come up to Crandon's job, so Billet lost out." "Now, doesn't it seem odd that a few weeks later Hanley winds up with his own airport, a $50,000 plane of his own and all the backing in the world from Crandon's bank?" Clare was white-faced at the end of the recital. "I can't believe it," she whispered. "Steve couldn't do a thing like that." "One last thing," Eddie Franklin said. "This plane of Hanley's, the one you rode in today, is secretly designed and the fastest thing in the air. It was designed by Roger Caswell." (To be continued)
